CONGRESS.

KNOW-NOTHING MOVEMENT IN THE SENATE

NATURALIZATION TERM 21 YEARS.

European Affairs and American Mediation.

RELIEF TO DR. KANE'S EXPEDITION REFUSED.

OCEAN MAIL APPROPRIATIONS.

THIRTY-THIRD CONGRESS—Second Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 11.

Mr. BADGER presented the credentials of DAVID S. REID, Senator-elect from North Carolina for six years from March 4, 1855.

Mr. REID then appeared and the oath of office administered to him.

Various petitions were then presented.

PROPOSAL TO EXTEND THE TERM OF NATURALIZATION TO TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

Mr. ADAMS introduced a bill to establish a uniform rule of naturalization throughout the United States. The bill extends the term of naturalization to twenty-one years, and acts prospectively upon those foreigners only who may enter the United States after the passage of the act. He addressed the Senate, reading his remarks in a tone of voice which rendered them almost unintelligible in the galleries. He was understood as arguing that in one hundred years from this time every inch of the American Continent would be required for the support of the American people. Self-preservation then required that no indoctrination should be held out to immigration. He denied any connection with Know-Nothing societies, or with any other political secret association. He disclaimed all hostility to foreigners, and read from one of his former speeches to show that he had no unkind feelings towards them; but that he did think immigration was dangerous, inasmuch as foreigners ranged themselves with Abolitionists. When he learned that a band of Germans had burned an American Spartan in effigy, he determined to introduce the bill. He has to be understood the principles of the Know-Nothings by speaking with them. He agreed with their propositions to extend the term of naturalization, and believed in their preference of American Protestants for office to foreigners and Catholics.

The bill was then read and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. WELLER offered a resolution calling for all correspondence relative to the arrest, &c., of the French Consul at San Francisco. Adopted.

Mr. SHIELDS gave notice of bills for the improvement of the Illinois River, and for the improvement of the harbors of Chicago and Waukegan.

Mr. FOOT introduced a bill to extend the courts of equitable jurisdiction in certain criminal cases. Referred.

Mr. CHASE gave notice of a bill to abolish the franking privilege.

Mr. BRODHEAD reported back the bill to establish a Court of Accounts.

OCEAN MAIL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Appropriation bill of the last session for the support of the ocean mail steamers was then taken up. It stands in the following position: The House at the last session passed the bill, combining a clause requiring the Postmaster General to give notice of proposals for letting the contract, and the Senate afterwards amended the bill by striking out this clause, and then the two Houses failed to agree upon the matter.

Mr. BRODHEAD moved now that the bill be referred to the Committee on Post Roads. He thought the allowance was too high, but was unwilling to give the notice, and take the vessels at their operatives' value. He regarded the steamers as utterly useless for war vessels.

Mr. HAMLIN urged that the matter be laid over until Mr. BUSH should arrive.

Mr. HUNTER said he was willing to wait until that time. He denied that the bill at this stage could be referred.

The Chair decided that the bill came up as unfinished business.

Mr. WELLER moved to postpone the matter one week.

Mr. SEWARD moved that it be laid on the table. Agreed to.

The Senate then adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 11.

AMERICAN MEDIATION.

Mr. CLINGMAN asked leave to offer a resolution requesting the President to tender the mediation of the United States in such manner as in his judgment may be most likely to lead to the pacification of the conflict now waging between the Allied armies and Russia.

Mr. HAMILTON, from a sense of duty, objected to the introduction of the resolution.

Mr. SCHAMBS asked whether it would be in order to move to lay it on the table.

The SPEAKER said it was not yet before the House.

Mr. CLINGMAN moved a suspension of the rules. Disagreed to; Ayes 47, Nays not counted.

RELIEF TO DR. KANE'S EXPEDITION.

Mr. FLORENCE asked leave to offer a joint resolution authorizing the President to cause an old state steamer and transport vessel to be purchased, or chartered and fitted out, equipped and provisioned for the purpose of carrying relief to Dr. KANE's expedition in the Arctic Sea, in search of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN, and to detail such officers and men from the Navy, and accept the services of such volunteers, at his discretion, as may be required for the conduct and manning thereof, the expenses to be paid out of the Treasury. Mr. FLORENCE said he merely wished the resolution to be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Objection made, and the House refused to suspend the rules.

NEW-APPARTMENT OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY-YARDS.

Mr. BRANCH, of Ga., called a resolution, which was adopted, requesting the President to communicate information relative to the establishment of the Mare Island Navy-Yard.

On motion, the Revenue Committee appointed last session on the subject of military expenditures over civil service was continued referred.

Three days of last week were set apart for the consideration of business relating to the District of Columbia.

APPROPRIATION.

Mr. HOUSTON, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported bills making appropriations for a Military Academy, and for the Support of the Army. Referred.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD BILL.

On motion of Mr. McDOUGAL the further consideration of the Pacific Railroad bill was postponed till the second Tuesday in January, in order to receive all the reports of the Engineers who surveyed the routes.

NAVY AFFAIRS.

Mr. STANTON introduced a bill providing for three additional Commodores in the Navy. Referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, on the President's Message.

Mr. HOUSTON offered a series of resolutions directing the usual number of copies to the appropriate standing Committees.

THE PRESIDENT OPPOSES NO NORTH BUT SOUTH BILL.

Mr. GIDDINGS hoped they would not be passed without proper discussion. As to Greytown, he agreed with the President in all his strictures for the destruction of the place, and would be glad to wipe out that transaction from the page of history. He believed the President has been guilty of numerous usurpations, and has caused a century from the great revolution, and has been guilty of treason. For the first time in twenty-five years the President has alluded to the subject of the Northern States Slavery. Where was the statement to be found in principle, so publicly avowed, to obtain Union by any compromise? The reason for the omission in that year was of the people, who resented it. The President, he made him, was forced to be compelled to resume the old policy of Government, pursued for the last fifty years. Why does he not speak further of his sentiments, and show his policy? The President has sent a Senate Minister to San Domingo, and through her we learn that our Government has entered into negotiations for obtaining a foothold there—but the President is silent on the subject.

Mr. GIDDINGS then alluded to the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and to the result of the late elections. He knew how the peculiar friends of the President on that issue were swept overboard.

Mr. INGERSOLL inquired whether the gentleman just elected to Congress in Massachusetts were the peculiar friends of the President?

Mr. GIDDINGS replied, he alluded to those who voted for the Nebraska and Kansas bill, and particularly to the gentleman who was about to retire to the shades of private life.

Mr. INGERSOLL said that no nominations for Congress have yet been made in Connecticut, and the gentleman from Ohio did not know if he (Mr. INGERSOLL) desired to be a candidate.

Mr. GIDDINGS—You never will be, probably. (Laughter.)

MR. INGERSOLL THERE HE CAN GO BEFORE HIS CONSTITUENTS WITH SAFETY.

Mr. INGERSOLL—Those who know me know more about my character than I do, but I can inform him on the question of popular sovereignty, as avowed in the Nebraska bill, I can go boldly before my constituents, and feel assured they will approve of my course.

A REMARK FROM MR. GIDDINGS.

Mr. GIDDINGS—I cannot say as the obituary notice, the gentleman's loss will be my gain, but will assert that the gain there of every man who voted for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise is a gain to freedom. In the course of his remarks in opposition to Slavery, he asked why the President does not come up to the support of his Slavery friends, or stands from the policy so boldly put forward. Recent elections have shown this Administration that principles of freedom are no longer to be trifled with, and that they must be maintained.

Mr. WHITNEY offered an amendment to the pending resolution, predicated by declaring in effect that in the construction of Government, the President has usurped a power in violation of the Constitution; and pending for the appointment of a Select Committee of Thirteen to report the facts relative thereto, with power to send for persons and papers.

Amendment rejected—Ayes, 54; Nays not counted.

The Committee rose.

Resolutions referring to the Message were adopted.

THE MAIL STEAMER BILL.

The Mail Steamer bill of last session was referred to the Post-Office Committee.

ISAAC TELLER, from New-York, in place of Mr. DEAN, appeared, and was qualified. House adjourned.

Business vs. Talking in Congress—The Foreign and New Party Questions—The Chief Measures Recommended by the President.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Dec. 10, 1854.

It is to be hoped that Congress will not neglect to act upon the chief measures recommended by the President and the heads of departments; the reorganization, improvement and augmentation of the Army and Navy; the establishment of a Law department and the modification of the Judiciary system; the reduction of the revenue; the better protection of lives of passengers; the establishment of a Board of Claims; the modification of the Patent laws; the supply of this city with good water, and the erection of fire-proof Executive buildings, and some other indispensable measures. Some of these measures may be delayed till the next Congress without great detriment to the public interests.

There are before Congress a number of projects for the disposition of the public lands, among which Mr. HUNTER's bills are prominent. Congress will make a choice between the general system of graduation, preemption, provision for paupers, and sale of lands to the states, in which they lie, and the alternative project of Mr. J. L. DAWSON, which passed the House by a large majority, at the late session. Mr. DAWSON has brought in a modified bill, which will meet some of the objections to it. Instead of granting a homestead to each citizen, for occupancy and cultivation, without any consideration, it now requires the payment of fourteen and a half cents an acre for the quantity for the actual average cost of the domain per acre, to the United States. The provision for the exemption of the land from execution is stricken out, on account of objections from some quarters to that beneficial feature.

Quite numerous telegraphic reports have been sent from Washington to the Democratic press, in regard to the Senatorial caucus which nominated Gov. BRIGHT for the Vice Presidency. The caucus was altogether harmonious. There was no division over the name of Mr. BRIGHT, he got every vote, and there was no other feeling but that of gratification at the result. Gov. BRIGHT's peculiar qualifications, his acknowledged political integrity and his personal standing with Senators and the country, made his party a unit on his name.

Neither will Mr. ATCHISON, should he arrive during the session, claim the Presidential chair, to which Mr. BRIGHT has been elevated. The personal relations between him and Mr. BRIGHT are of the most intimate character, and he has no doubt been gratified with what has taken place. The Senate can elect a presiding officer, but it cannot limit the term of his office; that is fixed by the Constitution.

Presidential movements are already perceptible and will commence in good earnest as soon as about Senators and members will return to the seat of Government. It is understood that the Know-Nothings will make no nomination, but run an Electoral Ticket in each State, and that an Electoral College will afterwards select a candidate most likely to carry out the views of the order. The people at large will have to go it blind.

In the Agricultural Bureau of our Patent Office business is quite active, preparing the valuable collection of seeds recently received from Europe, for distribution. There also may be seen samples of very superior Lucerne, raised by Mr. D. P. INGERSOLL, of Ottumwa, Iowa, on cold and that never was manured—the average of which, on five acres, was 120 bushels. It was shipped to Mr. L. a distance of 1,100 miles, last Spring. The Hon. Mr. LINDSLEY, of Ohio, also presents the collection of apples—fine specimens. The WAXEN (or Belmont) kind is peculiarly beautiful. From THOMASON's nursery, Atalanta, Ga., there is an apple, red in color, perfectly gold, a seedling known as the Shockley. A Winter apple in a few Southern climates.

It is estimated by one of our most distinguished agriculturists, that one-third of the produce of our soil is destroyed by the depredations of insects, and the annual loss to our planters is over a million of dollars. Commissioner MAHON, some months since took this subject in hand, and obtained the valuable services of Mr. GLOVER to travel and trace out all the facts in regard to this great yearly loss; of which I shall write more about in a subsequent letter.

The arrangement of the models in the gallery of the new wing of the Patent Office is also progressing and very attractive. There are displayed no less than 64 for sewing machines.

From Washington—Congress and the Holidays.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Dec. 11.

It is now pretty definitely settled that no business of any importance will be transacted by Congress until after the holidays are over. The various Committees are busy, however, and some show of work will be made in the interim.

HENRY A. FORD has been appointed Commercial Agent to Gaboon, Lower Guinea.

The report that the Sentinel of this city was to be discontinued has been denied.

In the Supreme Court here to-day DANIEL KELSO, of Indiana, was admitted as a counsellor. The case of BATTINS vs. JAMES TAGGART and others is still on.

Triumph of the Know-Nothings at the Municipal Elections in Boston and Worcester.

BOSTON, Monday, Dec. 11.

The municipal election which took place here to-day has resulted in the complete success of the "Know-Nothing" ticket.

The vote for Mayor stands as follows: J. V. C. SMITH, the present Mayor, and the Know-Nothing candidate, 6,469; GEO. B. UPTON, Whig, 4,420; ISAAC ADAMS, Democrat, 621; all others, 30.

It is possible that the Whigs may have elected some of their candidates to the Common Council.

A large procession of Know-Nothings, with bands of music, paraded the streets this evening. They called on the Mayor elect, cheered the Post-office, and expressed other congratulatory manifestations of delight for their success in the municipal election to-day.

WORCESTER, Monday, Dec. 11.

GEO. W. RICHARDSON, the Know-Nothing candidate for Mayor in this city, is elected, and the entire Know-Nothing ticket for municipal officers has been carried.

The vote for Mayor is as follows: GEO. W. RICHARDSON, Know-Nothing, 1,184; EASTBURNSON, Democrat, 600—all others, 60.

BEVERLY, Monday, Dec. 11.

In our municipal election to-day the Know-Nothings swept the city. The following is the vote for Mayor: JAMES RITCHIE, Know-Nothing, 604; J. S. SLEEPER, Citizen and Independent, 371.

CHARLESTOWN, Monday, Dec. 11.

The Know-Nothings were defeated here in the Municipal election to-day. TIMOTHY T. SAWYER, the citizens' candidate, was elected over BAILEY, the Know-Nothing candidate, by 358 plurality. The full Board of Aldermen and a majority of the Common Councilmen, are also elected on the citizens' ticket.

LYNN, Monday, Dec. 11.

In the Municipal election to-day the entire Know-Nothing ticket has been elected by a large majority. ANDREW BREED is Mayor.

Highly Important from Mexico—Progress of the Revolutionists.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Dec. 11.

Accounts from Orizaba, Mexico, to the 6th inst. say that a force of the rebels under Gen. MORELIA were routed, in the department of Michoacan, on the 24th of November, and three hundred of them killed.

In the engagement General ECHEAGARY, the Governor of the Province and Commander of the Government troops, was killed.

An election was going on in Mexico, whether SANTA ANNA should continue as President or not. He had issued a decree, compelling the Government employés to vote for him, the penalty being immediate dismissal in case they refused.

The Revolution appears to be gaining ground.

It is said that the Government of Honduras has agreed to sell Tiger Island to the United States for $20,000. Its ownership, however, is being disputed by San Salvador.

The Southern Mail—Arrival of the Ship Seaman at New-Orleans from Rio de Janeiro—Death of J. R. Gatmen.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Dec. 11.

The Southern mail as late as due has been received, bringing New-Orleans papers of last Monday and Tuesday.

The ship Seaman has arrived at New-Orleans, and brings dates from Rio de Janeiro to the 26th of October.

She left in port there the ship Sarah Boyd, from Calliao, repairing, and the ship Sophia Walker discharging. The bark Sarah A. Nichols was to sail for New-York the next day. The barks Rhone and John Wesley were waiting for cargoes, the Maine Law was discharging, and the David Rugby loading for New-York. The ship Grecian, from Manilla, had put back in a leaky condition, and the brigs Mary Kee and Boston were waiting for cargoes. On the 29th of November the Seaman spoke the bark Leesg, sixty-one days from Rio, and supplied her with provisions.

JOHN RANDOLPH GRIMES, an eminent member of the bar of this city, who died on the 3d instant, was an Aid-de-Camp under General JACKSON at the battle of New-Orleans.

Fires at Troy.

TROY, Monday, Dec. 11.

A fire occurred in this city last night, destroying BUTTERFIELD's shoe store, No. 146 River-street, and another fire this morning destroyed BELLECK's clothing store adjoining. The buildings were owned by Mr. G. P. WILLIAMSON, and are both in ruins. Loss $15,000, half of which is covered by insurance. Both fires were the work of incendiaries. One man was badly injured by jumping from a third-story window.

Arrest for Obtaining Goods Under False Pretences.

LOUISVILLE, Monday, Dec. 11.

A Jew, by the name of ROSENTHAL, residing in this city, was arrested to-day on a requisition from the Governor of Pennsylvania, charged with obtaining goods in Philadelphia under false pretenses to the amount of sixty thousand dollars. He left here this morning in charge of an officer from Philadelphia.

Suspension of Taylor & Cassilly—Exchanges.

CINCINNATI, Monday, Dec. 11.

The firm of TAYLOR & CASSILLY, a New-Orleans house, have suspended payment, having been largely involved and embarrassed by the failure of GEORGE MILNE & Co. of this city. They have a large excess of assets.

We quote Eastern Exchange at par to one per cent. premium.

Failure of J. W. Blodgett & Co. for $2,000,000.

DEEP SNOW—It snowed steadily for three days in Rochester. Nothing like it has occurred for many years. The snow is three feet deep in the woods, where there are no drifts. Trains of cars were blockaded in the drifts in every direction. The blockade was perfect from Monday until Wednesday morning.

SERMON AGAINST THE K. N.'S.—On Thanksgiving day, Dr. BACON, of New Haven, preached a sermon against Know-Nothingism, or what he called "the wickedness and wickedness prejudice against foreigners which has lately exhibited itself in some parts of the country."

A SPLENDID AFFAIR.—The Chicago Light Guards give a ball at that place tonight. We have it stated that Dodworth's Band, from New-York, furnished the music, price $2,000!—Milwaukee News.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The $5,000 Well-known Forgery.—Yesterday morning Lieutenant CARNILL, of the Ninth Ward Police, and ex-Officer GILBERT F. HAYS, succeeded in arresting three young women, named ANNY DALY, CATHERINE DAWES and CATHERINE CLARKE. They stand charged with being concerned with ACKERMAN, MERES, and others, in the late forgery of a $5,000 Bank draft on Wall-street, which was published in the list issue of the TIMES. There are now seven individuals locked up in the City Prison, accused of jointly enjoying the proceeds of the crime thus cleverly perpetrated on the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company. In order to allow sufficient time for the officers to trace out some of the funds, the magistrate has not yet fixed a day for the hearing.

The young man who defrauded the Ohio Trust Company of $5,000, was not the Confidential Clerk of the concern, as stated yesterday, but a junior employé, who was discharged for neglect of duty sixty days ago. The gentleman who occupies the post of Confidential Clerk has been in the office ten years or more, and enjoys the entire confidence of the Company.

A Case of Fraud Dismissed.—Several days ago two merchants named HENRY J. IMBOTSON and SAMUEL F. IMBOTSON were arrested by Officer WEBB of the Lower Police Office, upon a charge of fraudulently obtaining several thousand dollars from Mr. GEORGE M. CHAPMAN. The whole matter has since been investigated before Judge OSBORNE, who, yesterday, decided there was not sufficient evidence adduced to sustain a criminal prosecution. The magistrate accordingly dismissed the case, and discharged the accused parties from custody.

The Ocean Bank Defalcation.—Yesterday afternoon the parties concerned in the recent heavy defalcation by the First Teller of the Ocean Bank, appeared before Judge BOSWORTH at Chambers in the new Court-house. On behalf of the Bank officers, Messrs. JAMES R. WHITING and OSCAR W. STURTEVANT appeared as counsel, and JAMES T. BRADY, Esq., appeared for Mr. McGUNNIS, the prisoner. His Honor was ready to proceed with the inquiry, but owing to pressing engagements of the counsel, a postponement was granted until Thursday next at 3 o'clock P. M.

Mexico Affairs.—The packet ship Shelter, Capt. HILLS, arrived at this port to-day, after a boisterous passage from Havre. She was forty days crossing the Atlantic, in gales, in which her sails were split. She had two deaths among her emigrants. She brought three hundred passengers to the City.

Captain DIXON, of the packet ship Fidelia, who arrived at this port on Sunday night, from Liverpool, reports that his vessel was eleven days on the east coast of Newfoundland, beating down to Cape Race, with light contrary winds and thick weather. She was twenty-two days west of Cape Race. In latitude 44° 20', longitude 56°, she passed a large propeller, bound east. In latitude 58°, longitude 40°, CHARLES OLIVER, a seaman, fell overboard and was drowned. On the outward passage, ANDREW J. WILKES, of Rhode Island, fell overboard and was lost. Nov. 28, latitude 40°, longitude 64°, spoke brigantine Pennsylvania bound east. Dec. 2, Fire Island bearing west by north 20 miles, the Fidelia took heavy gales from the westward, and was driven back to Nantucket Shoals. She had a succession of westerly winds and severe weather the entire passage. She brought 400 emigrants to New-York.

Riles L. Smith again Rejected.—On the evening of Thursday last the nomination of ELIAS L. SMITH, Esq., as President of the Croton Aqueduct Board, was called up in the Board of Aldermen. On the question of confirmation a vote was taken without debate, and the nominee was rejected.

Last evening Mayor WESTERVELT again sent the name of Mr. SMITH to the Board of Aldermen for the Presidency of this Department. Many of the members manifested great surprise that the Mayor should permit in nominating a man for so high a station who had been rejected but a few evenings previously. It was urged by several Aldermen that Mr. SMITH should not receive the appointment, as he was wholly incompetent, and to show there was no political feeling in the matter, four of Mr. SMITH's own party (Democratic) voted against his confirmation.

Action was finally taken on the question, and Mr. SMITH was rejected the second time by a vote of fourteen to six. It is now asserted that in case Mr. WESTERVELT sends the name of ELIAS L. SMITH to the Board again, it will be referred to a Committee, and allowed to remain until Mayor WOOD elect takes his seat, thus throwing the appointment in his hands.

Appointment in the Tax-Office.—Last evening ALFRED VERMILYE, Esq., was nominated to the Board of Aldermen, by HARVEY HART, Esq., Receiver of Taxes, as his First Clerk, in place of Mr. JOHN HOBE, recently appointed Deputy Receiver. The nominee was confirmed by a vote of 16 to 5.

The City Treasury.—The Board of Councilmen has called upon the Comptroller for information in regard to the amount of moneys, due to officers of the City Government and contractors, which have not been paid and will not be paid before the close of the year, by reason of the inadequacy of the appropriations for 1854. The employés of the Corporation have already suffered hindrance by the lack of money in the Treasury; many of them having been compelled to wait for very considerable periods before receiving their pay.

Colored Orphan Asylum.—At the annual election of the Managers of the Colored Orphan Asylum yesterday, the old Board of Managers, with but two changes, was continued in office. A new Nursery Department is being built in the rear of the principal edifice, which, with the hospital building lately erected, quite materially increases the facilities of the Asylum. The last annual report shows admitted within the past year 219.

Schools.—The Board of Education reports that there is a large increase in the number of children who have attended the Schools of the City during the past year. The exact figures have not been given. In order to meet the implied criticisms of the Common Council, the Board states that the appropriations of the year have been applied according to law.

Gamblers in Boarding-House Receipts.—On Saturday evening, between the hours of 6 and 7 o'clock, the houses Nos. 35 and 37 West Twenty-third-street, occupied as boarding-houses, were entered by a false key, and clothing to the amount of $70 was stolen from Mr. JOHN H. HAKEWILL, one of the boarders.

The Recorder's Salary Reduced.—The Board of Supervisors, at its session of Tuesday, resolved to increase the salary of the Recorder of the City from $2,000 to $3,000, to take effect from the 1st January next. The new incumbent of that office will probably have no objections to the rise.

Killed by a City Railroad Car.—Yesterday morning, a citizen named J. D. WARD, was fatally injured by being run over by Car No. 23 of the Second-avenue Railroad. The unfortunate man was conveyed to the City Hospital, where he was attended by a skillful surgeon, but all efforts to save his life were unavailing, as he died in less than one hour. Information of the sad affair was sent to the Coroner's office and an inquest will be held this morning.

Reappointment of Jonathan W. Allen.—The term of office of JONATHAN W. ALLEN, Esq., one of the Commissioners of Taxes, having expired a few days ago, he has been reappointed by a unanimous vote of the Board of Supervisors.

A Hoax.—A rumor was started in the City yesterday to the effect that a serious battle had taken place in Mercer-street, between TOM HYER and BILL FOULS, which resulted in the former being severely stabbed in the abdomen. It was a hoax.

Lecture.—Rev. ANTOINETTE L. BROWN will give the third lecture of the Anti-Slavery Course, at the Tabernacle, this evening, on the "Influence of Slavery upon Woman, and Woman's duty in relation thereto."

A Hundred Guns.—One hundred guns were fired in the Park yesterday afternoon, in honor of the Whig Victory in the State. The Whig General Committee brought out the big gun.

☞ A thaw set in yesterday. The Sun shone warmly, for the first time in a week. The streets were nearly impassable, and the mud and snow got intermingled in a way that was exceedingly perilous. But few traces are left of the snow and ice that came along last week. The night was clear and starry.

☞ Rev. Dr. CURRY, Pastor of the Twenty-seventh-street Methodist Episcopal Church, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday evening, preparatory to assuming the duties of President of the Ashbury (Indiana) University.

☞ The examining-up in the ORTLEPP Divorce Case commenced yesterday. Mr. JORDAN commenced and finished his argument for the defence, (SOLOMON CHILDS,) and JOHN GRAHAM, Esq., will follow to-day for the prosecution.

☞ It is understood that the Report of the Committee on the Opening of Albany-street is ready for presentation to the Board of Councilmen, lacking only the signature of a member of the Committee.

☞ Two thousand barrels of flour, 400 bags wheat, 4,800 swine, and 3,000 pounds butter, were among the receipts of produce at the Erie Railroad Depôt from Saturday noon to yesterday morning.

☞ JOHN HILL, Esq., an old and respected citizen, died yesterday, aged 80. He was a native of Ireland.

☞ We understand that Maunsell B. Field, Esq., of this City, who is now sojourning with his family in Paris, has been appointed by Governor Seymour to be Commissioner and Agent of the State of New-York in the World's Fair to be held at Paris in 1855. We also learn that Mr. Field is acting as Secretary of Legation under Mr. Mason, during the absence of Mr. Pike, who returned to this country a few days ago on a short visit.—Post.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—Dec. 11.

Before Judge Hall.

The case of Jacob Sherwin vs. the steamboat New-York was resumed in this morning by the counsel for the respective parties. The calendar was then called and the case of The United States vs. One case marked B. and S., 240, containing woolen cloths, &c., was taken up.

This is a proceeding to forfeit the goods to the United States under the 65th section of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1799, on having been contraband, and the Claimant not paid. The goods were seized in the month of September last, in a chest on board the steamer Hermann, belonging to one of the passengers by the steamer.

The testimony for the Government was closed, and the defence is to proceed in the morning.

For the United States, Mr. Jonathanson and Mr. Cochran; for claimant, Mr. Stallknecht.

$1,000.—BURGLARS FOILED.—J. C. MORRIS, Esq., Agent of World's Safe Company, No. 149 Pearl-street, Dear Sir: The No. 7 Safe and No. 2 Lock, "Lilies Patent," purchased of you last Spring was operated on by burglars on the night of Nov. 30, without success, or injury to the Safe or Lock. They worked all night—judging from the appearance of small pieces of sperm candles found in the morning near the Safe. It contained about $1,000. The key was left with the Safe, which the burglars had the use of; but it was of no service to them, and their operations caused us no inconvenience, except the loss of the key. The confidence we put in your Safes against burglars is now fully established. Yours, respectfully, HICKS & HATHAWAY, No. 114 Broad-street.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 5, 1854.

☞ Considerable anxiety, and in some cases actual alarm, has been felt by many ladies lest the entire stock of HEARN, CLAFF & Co., No. 303, Grand-street, should be disposed of before they have an opportunity of taking advantage of the great bargains offered at this establishment. We can yet assure them, notwithstanding the immense amount of Rich Dress Goods already disposed of, there still remains a complete assortment of Rich Shawls, Silks, Velvets, Palmer Cloths, Merino de Laines, &c., &c., &c., all of which they are offering at prices full 20 per cent. below their cost. From a correct estimate of the amount of sales during the last three weeks, their actual loss amounts to $14,000 and upward—a smug little sum during the scarcity of money.

☞ Poor Minnie is sick! What Minnie, daughter? Why, Minnie Myrtle—poor Minnie! I loved to hear you read, Mother, the sweet things she said in the Times paper. Maybe she's got a cold, and is in low spirits. Won't you send Minnie some of Dr. WISTAR's Balsam Pectoral? If the Times man didn't charge so much, I guess the doctor would put his medicine in that paper, and then Minnie would see it, and she'd get it and be well, and then, Mother, she could write us more good things. But I wish I could see Minnie, I'd tell her she could get some at Mr. YOUNG's bookstore, No. 146 Fulton-street.

Mysterious Affair—Supposed Murder in Newark.—Yesterday morning a number of pieces of bone, apparently parts of a skull, and a lock of human hair, were found in Newark-st., intermixed with pools of recently shed blood, and the ground in the vicinity bearing marks of a scuffle, led to the supposition that a murder has been committed. Considerable excitement was caused, which was subsequently allayed, on the statement of some physicians that the bones had not probably belonged to a human skull. Other evidences of a murder and violence being afterwards discovered, suspicion was again revived, and the attention of the Mayor and City Marshal being called to the circumstances, they were led to the conclusion that a murder had taken place, and that the scattered bones were portions of some person's body. Several physicians have concurred in this opinion, with reference to the matter, and the only doubts now entertained are as to the probability of a human hoax having been perpetrated for the purpose of exciting the public mind.

A reliable individual living in the vicinity, states that about 11 o'clock on the midnight of Saturday, he heard a tumult in the street, and going outside of his residence, saw a gathering of persons, who were apparently Germans, and who appeared to be engaged in a row. A colored woman living near, also states that she heard cries of murder. The City Marshal found yesterday in possession of a boy, the handle and blade of which were broken, and spots of blood were discovered on it. A fresh wagon track was traced for some distance from the spot where the remains were found, and drops of blood were discovered in the track along the ground, leading to the conclusion that the body had been conveyed away in the wagon. No other circumstances have yet been elicited to clear up the mystery. The pieces of bone are white, and the hair is fine and brown, of considerable length. The authorities are actively engaged in endeavoring to elucidate the mystery, and discover the guilty parties engaged in the awful transaction supposed to have occurred.—Advertiser, 11.

COLLEGE OF NEW-JERSEY.—We learn with pleasure that a permanent endowment of the Professorship of Dr. GUYOT in the College of New-Jersey, at Princeton, has been secured, and that his lectures to the classes, now in course of delivery, are producing great enthusiasm, both among the students and citizens of the town, many of whom seek admission to the lecture room. We take occasion here to correct a misstatement in the New-York papers, which, in announcing Prof. GUYOT's lectures before the Mercantile Library Association, connects his name with a Professorship in Harvard University, an institution to which he has no official relation.—Newark Advertiser.

PROSECUTIONS OF THE LIQUOR SELLERS.—On Wednesday, the prosecutions of the indictment liquor-sellers of Jersey City will be resumed—a number of cases having been set down for that day. BARNUM'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

THE LIFE OF P. T. BARNUM. Written by Himself. 1 vol. 12mo., pp. 404. Redfield: New-York.

Here it is—at last. Here is a full, true and particular account of the proceedings (so far as it pleases him to tell them) of P. T. BARNUM, dedicated "To the Universal Yankee Nation." Here is an Autobiography much be-puffed in advance—mantured in humbug—and, with no lack of faults, but really a very amusing book, which every one will read, half the world will abuse, and nobody can help laughing at and with. Here may be traced the rise and progress of Mr. BARNUM, with sketches of his career interior to such adroit schemes as the exhibition of JOICE HETH, the Fejee Mermaid, and the Woolly Horse, to say nothing of Tom Thumb, JENNY LIND, and the redoubtable Fire Annihilator. Everybody will say, "Well, if BARNUM would only tell half the truth, what an amusing book he could make!" We cannot analyze it, nor determine what quantity of veracity is infused into this work—but it is evident that Mr. BARNUM does "let the cat out of the bag" to a considerable extent, and hesitates not to give details even when they tell against himself. For, incredible as it may appear, he did not out all his wisdom teeth at once. Now and then he was "done" exceedingly brown, while trying to do others, and often the laugh goes against himself. When a man writes his own history, we must take all that he pleases to give us. He is not sworn to tell "the whole truth and nothing but the truth." He is a self-exhibitor, and so have been all autobiographers from EDWARD GIBBON, the historian, down to JAMES HARDY VAUX, who describes himself as a "thief and pickpocket." Mr. BARNUM has produced a striking volume—not the least successful, we prophesy, of his many speculations—and it will sell in tens of thousands, and be read by a couple of million persons in this country and in Europe. BARNUM has seen life in a variety of ways, and has come out of the trial in a whole skin, and with a full purse. "He who wins may laugh," says the proverb, and if success create mirth, BARNUM might be on the broad grin for the rest of his life. Amid the conventionalities of Europe, where, even yet, a man usually clings through life to the profession in which he started, however ill-adapted he may be for it, such a character as BARNUM is almost impossible. Not one European in forty millions could say, as he says:

"I have been a farmer's boy and a merchant, a clerk and a manager, a showman and a bank President. I have been in jails and in palaces; have known poverty and abundance; have traveled over a large portion of two Continents; have encountered all varieties of men, have seen every phase of human character; and I have on several occasions been in imminent personal peril."

But he has been in more public capacities than he here enumerates. He has plucked experience or profit from each successive enterprise, and now—the showman is a millionaire.

PHINEAS TAYLOR BARNUM, aware that seven cities contended for the honor of having respectively been the birth place of HOMER, kindly puts an end to all doubts in his own case, by announcing that he was born in the village of Bethel, Fairfield County, Connecticut. He first saw the light of this world on July 5, 1810. Consequently, (and he strongly protests against being called "Old BARNUM,") he is now only in his forty-fifth year. He indulges freely in recollections of his grandfather and father, (the latter died in 1825,) and of various persons—men, women and children—whom he fell across in his youth, but, as it is in himself, and not in his friends, that the public feel interested, we shall politely raise our beaver to the cavalcade, and silently let it pass on.

To school at the age of six, where he says:

"I was generally admonished a pretty apt scholar, and as I increased in years there were but two or three in school who were considered my superiors. In arithmetic I was unusually quick, and I recollect, at the age of twelve years, being called out of bed one night by my teacher, who had laid a small wager with a neighbor that I could figure up and give the correct number of feet in a load of wood in five minutes. The neighbor stated the dimensions, and as I had no slate in the house I marked them on the stove pipe, and thereon also figured my calculations, and gave the result in less than two minutes, to the great delight of my teacher, my mother, and myself, and to the no small astonishment of our incredulous neighbor."

At school, long before he entered his teens, his money-making propensities developed themselves. He saved a dollar, added to it, and,

"On 'training days,' instead of spending money I was earning it in the vocation of a peddler. My stock in trade consisted of a gallon of molasses, boiled down and worked into molasses candy, called in those times, 'cookasin,' and I usually found myself a dollar richer at the end of 'training,' than I was at the commencement. As I alwaysa had a remarkable taste for speculation, my holiday stock soon increased, and comprised 'gingerbread,' cookies, sugar candies, and cherry rum. The latter article consisted of a demijohn of New-England rum, in which was put a quantity of wild cherries, and I believe a little sugar. I soon learned that the soldiers were good cherry rum customers, and no sooner did I hear the words 'halt,' 'ground arms,' then I approached the 'trainers' with my decanter and wine-glass. In a few years I should have been a second CRŒSUS in wealth, had not my father considerately allowed me to purchase my own clothing. This arrangement kept my pile reduced to a moderate size. Always looking out for the main chance, however, I had sheep of my own, a calf of which I was the sole proprietor, and other individual property which made me feel, at twelve years of age, that I was quite a man of substance."

Very truthfully, indeed, did WORDSWORTH say, "The child is father of the man." In the schoolboy, selling cherried rum to the soldiers, and owning live stock at the age of twelve, the predestined proprietor of the American Museum, and the owner of Iranistan looms distinctly on the future. In 1833 he visited New-York, and he spins out five pages in an account of how he squandered his solitary dollar in oranges, a pop-gun, a few torpedoes, a lot of pinchback ornaments, a penknife, and a lot of the sweet infusion called sixpence candy. This is regular book-making, but not out of character or place as an illustration of—humbug. This word reminds us of a note, towards the close of the volume, which gives happy promise of another work from the BARNUM manufactory. He says:

"It has often occurred to me that the true History of Humbug would prove a highly valuable and interesting publication. Every period has had its humbugs, and they are found possessed alike in the annals of every calling and profession. My researches upon this subject have by no means been confined to the sphere of a showman; and, having been convinced that an elaborate expose of its workings, through the entire range of history, would startle as well as enlighten the community, I am preparing, and hope in good time to publish, a work that I trust will do full justice to that universal science."

We sincerely hope that such a master of the art of Humbug may write its History, and that we, who humbly stand outside the temple, may live to review it.

Very much opposed to hard work, but not objecting to hard work, the boy BARNUM was made clerk in a country store, at Bethel, in which something of everything was to be purchased. The dignity of this new calling elevated him. He says:

"I strutted behind the counter with a pen back of my ear, was wonderfully polite to ladies, astonished a wise look when entering charges upon the daybook, was remarkably active in waiting upon customers, whether in weighing tenpenny nails, cheese, factings, or calicoes, or drawing New-England rum or West India molasses."

How he did the old woman who came to barter with him may be found in the book, for we cannot write twice the youth. To the book, also, we refer for various minute incidents which show the formation of our hero's character. We would hint, as an economic fact, that shipping coins, remittances, that are Mr. BARNUM's delight, are particularly disagreeable to generality to very many. Fun is not his element, but he sometimes rubs Joe Miller. For example, seizing the worn-out joke of the Yorkshiremen, who warranted a horse free from fault, and having had the animal pronounced as blind, retorting that it was its misfortune and not its fault, Mr. BARNUM spins two pages and a half out of it, changing the scene to his native Bethel, and making one Peter O'Brien the hero of the tale.

BARNUM's next adventure was in the lottery line. Before he was fifteen years old, as early as 1825, his grandfather and three others were managers of a lottery of 12,000 tickets, $5 each; 11,400 set down at prizes of $2 50 each, and 600 with higher prizes. BARNUM says:

"Persons who had bought two tickets, being sure of losing not more than $5 at the worst, found themselves losers $5 75, for as the scheme announced 'all prizes subject to the usual deduction of 15 per cent,' each $2 50 prize realized to the holder $2 12½, 'payable in 60 days.'"

Indignation at "the sell" was general, of course. "The whole country was in an uproar." No wonder, say we, for it was sailing very close to a swindling. By and by, PHIN. TAYLOR was declared to be "the 'cutest man in those parts," and his living grandson, who chronicles the incident, sees nothing objectionable in it, but admiringly regards it as "a capital practical joke." So is burglary, or pocket-picking, or Peter Funkism. On the same page which chronicles this "practical" movement of PHIN. TAYLOR's it is gravely related that the said "'cutest man" was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and "somewhat learned in the law." No doubt there was more law than justice at his side.

Bethel was too limited an arena for the exercise of P. T. BARNUM's ability. He removed to Brooklyn—our Brooklyn, within hail of the Empire City, which, a few years later, he was extensively to subsidize. He became clerk in a grocery store there in the Autumn of 1826, and in the following year, at the ripe age of 17, opened a porter house which he soon sold out to become clerk in a like concern at Peekskill, New-York. Now he took to visiting theatres. In 1828, he returned to Bethel, opened a general store there, entered largely into selling lottery tickets, and in November 1829, did himself draw a capital prize in the comely shape of an excellent wife, whom he describes as "one of the best women that ever was created." She shared his early struggles, and survives to enjoy the fruits of his maturer enterprise and success.

In the Winter of 1829–30, BARNUM dealt largely in the lottery line, and for a few months became a bookseller. In 1831, he joined one of his uncles in a large store at Bethel, which did not succeed. In the Fall of the same year, piqued with the Danbury weekly paper for not inserting several controversial and polemical articles which he had written, he commenced a newspaper of his own, called the Herald of Freedom. He carried this on for three years, and thrice was prosecuted for libel—twice by the State. In accusing a butcher of usury he was fined several hundred dollars; on one of the State trials he was fined $100 and imprisoned for sixty days in the common jail of Danbury. Thence he emerged "a wiser and a sadder man," (like the wedding guest in the "Ancient Mariner,") got a public dinner, made a triumphal entry into Bethel, and soon after—sold his newspaper.

In 1834–5 he moved to New-York with very little money, and became "drummer" to several stores, receiving a small commission on all sales which they made to customers introduced by him. An application for the situation of bar-keeper to Mr. WILLIAM NIBLO was unsuccessful, because he would not bind himself to a three years' engagement.

In May 1835, he opened a small private boarding-house in Frankfort-street, and a share in a grocery store in South-street.

Now came the culminating point of his life. A Mr. BARTRAM called on him to say:

"That he had owned an interest in an extraordinary negro woman, named JOICE HETH, whom he believed to be one hundred and sixty-one years of age, and whom he also believed to have been the nurse of General WASHINGTON. He had sold out his interest to his partner R. W. LINDSAY, of Jefferson County, Ky., who was now exhibiting her in Philadelphia, but not having much tact as a showman, he was anxious to sell out and return home."

BARTRAM handed BARNUM a Philadelphia paper in which was duly advertised:

"JOICE HETH, a negress aged 161 years, who formerly belonged to the father of General WASHINGTON. She has been a member of the Baptist Church one hundred and sixteen years, and can rehearse many hymns, and sing them according to former custom. She was born near the old Potomac River in Virginia, and has for ninety or one hundred years lived in Paris, Ky., with the BOWLING family. All who have seen this extraordinary woman are satisfied of the truth of the account of her age. The evidence of the BOWLING family, which is respectable, is strong, but the original bill of sale of AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON, in his own handwriting, and other evidence which the proprietor has in his possession, will satisfy even the most incredulous."

BARNUM went off to Philadelphia, and saw LINDSAY. What follows cannot be abridged:

"I was favorably struck with the appearance of the old woman. So far as outward indications were concerned, she might almost as well have been called a thousand years old as any other age. She was lying upon a high lounge in the middle of the room; her lower extremities were drawn up, with her knees elevated some two feet above the top of the lounge. She was apparently in good health and spirits, but former disease or old age, or perhaps both combined, had rendered her unable to change her position; in fact, although she could move one of her arms at will, her lower limbs were fixed in their position, and could not be straightened. She was totally blind, and her eyes were so deeply sunken in their sockets that the eyeballs seemed to have disappeared altogether. She had no teeth, but possessed a head of thick bushy gray hair. Her left arm lay across her breast, and she had no power to remove it. The fingers of her left hand were drawn down so as nearly to close it, and remained fixed and immovable. The nails upon that hand were about four inches in length, and extended above her wrist. The nails upon her large toes also had grown to the thickness of nearly a quarter of an inch.

"She was very sociable, and would talk almost incessantly so long as visitors would converse with her. She sang a variety of ancient hymns, and was very garrulous when speaking of her protégé 'dear little GEORGE,' as she termed the great father of our country. She declared that she was present at his birth, that she was formerly the slave of AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON, the father of GEORGE, and that she was the first person who put clothes upon him. 'In fact,' said JOICE, and it was a favorite expression of hers, 'I raised him.' She related many interesting anecdotes of 'her dear little GEORGE,' and this, mixed with her conversations upon religious subjects, for she claimed to be a member of the Baptist Church, rendered her exhibition an extremely interesting one.

"I asked Mr. LINDSAY for the proofs of her extraordinary age, and he exhibited what purported to be a bill of sale from AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON, of the County of Westmoreland, Virginia, to 'ELIZABETH ATWOOD,' of 'one negro woman, named JOICE HETH, aged fifty-four years, for and in consideration of the sum of thirty-three pounds lawful money of Virginia.' The document bore the date 'fifth day of February, one thousand seven hundred and twenty-seven,' and was 'sealed and delivered in presence of RICHARD BUCKNER and WILLIAM WASHINGTON.'

"The story told by LINDSAY and 'Aunt JOICE' was, that Mrs. ELIZABETH ATWOOD was a sister-in-law of AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON, that the husband of JOICE was a slave of Mr. ATWOOD, and for that reason the above sale was made. As Mrs. ATWOOD was a near neighbor of Mr. WASHINGTON, Aunt JOICE was present at the birth of 'little GEORGE,' and she having long been the old family nurse, was the first person called upon to clothe the new born infant.

"The story seemed plausible, and the 'bill of sale' had every appearance of antiquity. It was exhibited in a glass frame, was very yellow in appearance, and seemed to have been folded for such a great length of time that the folds were worn nearly through, and in some parts entirely so.

"I inquired why the existence of such an extraordinary old woman had not been discovered and made known long ago. The reply was, that she had been lying in the possession of JOHN S. BOWLING, of Kentucky, for many years; that no one knew or seemed to care how old she was; that she had been brought thither from Virginia a long time ago, and that the fact of her extreme age had been recently brought to light by the discovery of this old bill of sale, in the Record Office in Virginia, by the son of Mr. BOWLING, who, while looking over the ancient papers in that office, happened to notice the paper endorsed JOICE HETH, that his curiosity was excited, and from inquiries made in that neighborhood, he was convinced that the document applied to his father's old slave then living, and who was, therefore, really one hundred and sixty-one years of age; that he thereupon took the paper home, and became confirmed in regard to the identity of JOICE with the slave described in that paper."

Three thousand dollars was the price asked for this old negress, but BARNUM beat it down to one thousand, of which he had only five hundred, vainly endeavored to borrow the balance, raised it by selling his interest in the grocery store, and finally bought the old woman—or rather, the right of exhibiting her for twelve months, from June 10, 1835.

JOICE HETH was brought to New-York, and exhibited at NIBLO's, with a profit of one thousand five hundred a week. When the interest flagged, the City was "flooded with posters," and the newspapers were largely employed to tickle the curiosity of the genuine public. BARNUM gives several amusing specimens of these puff-paragraphs, and adds:

"Our exhibition usually opened with a statement of the manner in which JOICE HETH was discovered, as well as the account of her antecedents in Virginia, and a reading of the bill of sale. We would then question her in relation to the birth and youth of General WASHINGTON, and she always gave satisfactory answers in every particular. Individuals among the audience would also frequently ask her questions, and put her to the severest cross-examinations, without ever finding her to deviate from what had every evidence of being a plain unvarnished statement of facts.

"JOICE was very fond of church-music, to which she would beat time by waving her long withered arm. On one occasion in New-York an aged Baptist minister stood by her side as she was singing one of her favorite hymns, and he joined her, and lined each verse. She was much pleased by this circumstance, and sang with renewed animation. After the hymn was finished, the clergyman lined off the verse of another hymn, and JOICE immediately remarking, 'I know that hymn,' joined him in singing it. He lined in this manner several hymns which were entirely new to me, and in each case JOICE knew them, and in one or two instances refreshed his memory when he found himself at a loss to recall the exact language of the verses. JOICE loved to converse upon religious subjects, and frequently insisted on the attendance of clergymen for that purpose.

"The question naturally arises, if JOICE HETH was an impostor, who taught her these things? and how happened it that she was so familiar, not only with ancient psalmody, but also with the minute details of the WASHINGTON family? To all this, I unhesitatingly answer, I do not know. I taught her none of these things. She was perfectly familiar with them all before I ever saw her, and she taught me many facts in relation to the WASHINGTON family with which I was not before acquainted."

The old negress was exhibited in Providence and Boston. At the latter place, says BARNUM,

"Our exhibition room continued to attract large numbers of visitors for several weeks before there was any visible falling off. I kept up a constant succession of novel advertisements and unique notices in the newspapers, which tended to keep old JOICE fresh in the minds of the public, and served to sharpen the curiosity of the people."

One of these went to the length of saying:

"JOICE HETH is not a human being. What purports to be a remarkably old woman is simply a curiously constructed automaton, made up of whalebone, india-rubber, and numberless springs ingeniously put together, and made to move at the slightest touch, according to the will of the operator. The exhibitor is a ventriloquist, and all the conversations apparently held with the ancient lady are purely imaginary, so far as she is concerned, for the answers and incidents pimporting to be given and related by her, are merely the ventriloquial voice of the exhibitor."

Of course, crowds, who had seen her as flesh and blood, (or rather, as skin and bone,) went again to see if she were composed of whalebone, india-rubber, and steel-springs. In various cities the exhibition was attended with great and invariable success. At last, in February, 1836, JOICE HETH died. Her body, which had been conveyed to New-York, was examined by a skillful surgeon, who said that from its internal appearances, instead of being 161 years old, the negress was probably not over 80. Then went out a report, says BARNUM, "of her having been first found by me in the outhouse of a plantation in Kentucky—of my having extracted all her teeth—taught her the WASHINGTON story—called her 110 years old in Louisville, 121 in Cincinnati—twenty years elder in Pittsburg, and 161 at Philadelphia," together with a grave averment that the dissected body was that of Aunt NELLY, an old negress who had died at Harlem, and that the real JOICE HETH was alive, and being exhibited in Connecticut. The credulous New-York Herald was hoaxed into relating these fables. JOICE HETH was buried in BARNUM's native Bethel, and so ends his first great humbug.

BARNUM next joined a traveling circus, in connection with AARON TURNER, the showman—taking with him as a "star," a balancing and plate-spinning Italian, whom he had picked up at Albany, while exhibiting JOICE HETH, and called Signor VIVALLA. In this tour, a member of the company made himself scarce. What was to be done? BARNUM says:

"I had advertised negro songs; no one of my company was competent to fill his place; but being determined not to disappoint the audience, I blacked myself thoroughly, and sung the songs advertised, namely, 'Zip Coon,' 'Gittin up Stairs,' and 'The Raccon Hunt, or Sitting on a Rail.' It was decidedly 'a hard push,' but the audience supposed the singer was SANFORD, and, to my surprise, my singing was applauded, and in two of the songs I was encored!"

In this tour a ludicrous incident occurred. BARNUM used sometimes to act as confederate to a performer named PENTLAND, in various tricks of legerdemain:

"His table had the usual trap-door for passing things to his assistant, preparatory to the magical transformations presented to the spectators. The quarters below were painfully narrow for a man of my size, but I volunteered for the occasion in the absence of the diminutive employé in that line of business. Squeezing into the allotted space, I found that my nose and my knees were likely to become acquainted by close contact—nevertheless, though heartily wishing myself out of the scrape, I held a live squirrel in my hand, ready to wind the chain of a watch around his neck and hand him up through the trap-door when needed.

"PENTLAND's arrangements of vases, cups, balls, and divers other accompaniments of legerdemain, were on the table. In due time, he called for a watch with a gold chain. One of the spectators favored him with the article, and it was soon passed into my possession, under a vase and through the little trap-door in the top of the table. Awkwardly performing my part, the squirrel bit me severely; I shrieked with pain, straightened my neck first, then my back, then my legs, overthrew the table, smashed every breakable article upon it, and rushed behind the curtain! The squirrel galloped off with the watch around his neck. PENTLAND was struck speechless, but if ever there was hooting and shouting in a mass of spectators, it was heard that night."

It would be tedious to trace BARNUM's route as traveling showman. In June 4, 1836, having disbanded the company, he arrived in New-York, with $2,500 which he had made and saved. He advertised for a partner, joined a manufacturer of paste-blacking, cologne water, and bear's grease: opened a manufactory in the Bowery; dissolved partnership in January, 1840; and was swindled out of the price of his interest, in a very ingenious manner. But some men have immense vitality—as with BARNUM in business. Early in 1840 he opened the saloon in Vauxhall Garden, on the stage of which Miss MARY TAYLOR made her first public appearance. In August, he closed the establishment and went with a mixed company of performers on a tour through the West and South, with quite money, returned to New-York in April 1841, and resolved never again to be an itinerant showman.

Again he entered into the bookselling business in an office then on the site of the present Nassau Bank, and within a few yards of the immortal corner in which are now located the offices of the New-York DAILY TIMES. He had another touch at the Vauxhall Saloon, and, when he closed it, became "Dramatic Censor," (or advertisement and puff-notice scribe,) to the Bowery Amphitheatre, at $4 a week! He scribbled a little for the Sunday press also, which was not then at all equal to what it now is. At last, (and the details are curious, though too long for quotation,) he succeeded in becoming proprietor of the American Museum, then as now at the corner of Broadway and Ann-street. This was in December, 1841; the price was $12,000; BARNUM had neither money nor property; but, by that personal economy and great energy, paid the whole purchase-money out of the profits of his first year. In his enumeration of the improvements, (and they are many,) which he has made in the Museum, it is quite "humbug" to boast of "the Moral Drama" being a principal feature in the Lecture room. There is no such room, but there is a pretty little theatre, at which twice a day dramas of various descriptions are performed, to large and very mixed audiences. BARNUM says, not unreasonably:

"If I have exhibited a questionable dead mermaid in my Museum, it should not be overlooked that I have also exhibited cameleopards, a rhinoceros, grisly bears, orang-outangs, great serpents, etc., about which there could be no mistake because they were alive; and I should hope that a little "clap trap" occasionally, in the way of transparencies, flags, exaggerated pictures, and puffing advertisements, might find an officer, in a wilderness of wonderful, instructive, and amusing realities."

The Fejee Mermaid, generally supposed to have been manufactured by BARNUM, or to his order, was palmed upon him—he says. History runs thus:

"Early in the Summer of 1842, MOSES KIMBALL, Esq., the popular proprietor of the Boston Museum, came to New-York and exhibited to me what purported to be a mermaid. He stated that he had bought it of a sailor whose father, while in Calcutta in 1817 as captain of a Boston ship, (of which Captain JOHN ELLERY was principal owner,) had purchased it, believing it to be a preserved specimen of veritable mermaid, obtained, as he was assured, from Japanese sailors. Not doubting that it would prove as surprising to others as it had been to himself, and hoping to make a rare speculation of it as an extraordinary curiosity, he appropriated $6,000 of the ship's money to the purchase of it, left the ship in charge of the mate, and went to London.

"He did not realize his expectations, and returned to Boston. Still believing that his curiosity was a genuine animal and therefore highly valuable, he preserved it with great care, not stinting himself in the expense of keeping it insured, though reengaged as ship's captain under his former employers to reimburse the sum taken from their funds to pay for the mermaid. He died possessing no other property, and his only son and heir, who placed a low estimate on his father' purchase, sold it to Mr. KIMBALL, who brought it to New-York for my inspection."

BARNUM's naturalist doubted the authenticity of the animal, for he "did not believe in mermaids." BARNUM, who saw that money might be made, incontinently believed in mermaids, and hired the specimen. The difficulty was to coax the public into the same belief. Letters appeared in the newspapers about a "certain Dr. GRIFFIN, agent of the Lyceum of Natural History in London, recently from Pernambuco, who had in his possession a most remarkable curiosity, being nothing less than a veritable mermaid, taken among the Fejee Islands, and preserved in China, where the Doctor had bought it at a high figure for the Lyceum of Natural History."

This notice, with variations, appeared in three New-York papers, and

"A few days subsequently to the publication of this thrice-repeated announcement, Mr. LYMAN (who was my employé in the case of JOICE HETH) was duly registered at one of the principal hotels in Philadelphia as Dr. GRIFFIN, of Pernambuco, for London. His gentlemanly, dignified, yet social manners and liberality, gained him a fine reputation for a few days; and when he paid his bill one afternoon, preparatory to leaving for New-York the next day, he expressed his thanks to the landlord for special attention and courtesy. 'If you will step to my room,' said LYMAN alias GRIFFIN, 'I will permit you to see something that will surprise you.' Whereupon the landlord was shown the most extraordinary curiosity in the world—a mermaid. He was so highly gratified and interested that he earnestly begged permission to introduce certain friends of his, including several editors, to view the wonderful specimen.

"'Although it is no interest of mine,' said the curiosity-hunter, 'the Lyceum of Natural History, of which I am agent, will not be injured by granting the courtesy you request.' And so an appointment was made for the evening.

"The result might easily be gathered from the editorial columns of the Philadelphia papers a day or two subsequently to that interview with the mermaid. Suffice it to say that the plan worked admirably, and the Philadelphia press aided the press of New-York in awakening a wide-reaching and increasing curiosity to see the mermaid.

"I may as well confess that those three communications from the South were written by myself, and forwarded to friends of mine, with instructions respectively to mail them, each on the day of its date. This fact and the corresponding post-marks did much to prevent suspicion of a hoax, and the New-York editors thus unconsciously contributed to my arrangements for bringing the mermaid into public notice."

Then the mermaid was brought to New-York, privately shown to editors and others by Dr. GRIFFIN, and duly paragraphed. The greatest curiosity, as we think, was that LYMAN, who was well known in New-York as the exhibiter of Joyce Heth, should not have been recognized when he reappeared there as Dr. GRIFFIN. We do not understand it.

BARNUM does not wonder that those reporters and editors who examined the mermaid should have believed in it:

"Nor is this to be wondered at, since, if it was a work of art, (oh, Mr. BARNUM!) the monkey and fish were so nicely conjoined that no human eye could detect the point where the junction was formed. The spine of the fish proceeded in a straight and apparently unbroken line to the base of the skull—the hair of the animal was found growing several inches down on the shoulders of the fish, and the application of a microscope absolutely revealed what seemed to be minute fish scales lying in myriads amidst the hair. The teeth and formation of the fingers and hands differed materially from those of any monkey or orang-outang ever discovered, while the location of the fins was different from those of any species of the fish tribe known to naturalists. The animal was an ugly, dried-up, black-looking, and diminutive specimen, about three feet long. Its mouth was open, its tail turned over, and its arms thrown up, giving it the appearance of having died in great agony."

Safely protected in a glass case, from minute examination, the pseudo-mermaid, (an ingenious Japanese manufacture, composed of the upper part of a monkey and the lower part of a fish,) was duly exhibited by GRIFFIN, alias LYMAN, as having been "taken in a fisherman's net at the Fejee Islands." He used to add, gravely, "It lived upwards of three hours after its capture." Mr. BARNUM adds:

"The mermaid was afterwards exhibited in various parts of the country, and finally returned to its owner, Mr. KIMBALL, who has ever since given it a prominent niche in his truly beautiful and attractive "Boston Museum. There it will remain until the 31st of March, 1855. On the 1st of April next, (a most appropriate day,) it will again make its appearance in my American Museum, New-York, where it will remain until January 1, 1856, to the admiration and astonishment, no doubt, of many thousand persons. On the 1st of January, 1856, the mysterious lady fish will again take up her old quarters under the guardianship of her owner, Miss Maude Kimball, (she having recently been married to the Baron Scudder, and thus acquiring the title,) and from that period the Fejee Mermaid will be installed as a permanent and interesting feature in the Boston Museum.

"That 'her ladyship' was an attractive feature, may be inferred from these facts and figures:

"The receipts of the American Museum for the four weeks immediately preceding the exhibition of the mermaid, amounted to $1,372. During the first four weeks of the mermaid's exhibition, the receipts amounted to $3,341 32."

Here pause we for the present. In our desire to let Mr. BARNUM tell his own story, respecting the various "humbugs," (as the public will call them,) we have occupied more space than we had calculated for.

The second and concluding notice will be more racy, as regards the quality of the Barnum Confessions, than the present is. We shall have to give the history of "General Tom Thumb;" his first appearance; his training; his European tour, with its personal incidents; and an elucidation of the manner in which Mr. BARNUM "worked the oracle" on his behalf. Also, the JENNY LIND speculation. Add to this the Woolly Horse—the "Grand Buffalo Hunt" at Hoboken—BARNUM's Agricultural mistakes, (potatoes and grafts)—the mixed venture of the Fire Annihilator—the notable adventure of the Illustrated Nonsense—the Presidency of the Crystal Palace—and personal recollections of considerable interest.

Decidedly, therefore, we must have a second notice of this "book of the Season."

Indian Murders in the West.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, Dec. 6, 1854.

News has just reached here that the mail carriers in charge of the mail from Utah were attacked and murdered on the 12th November, at Dripp's Trading Post, six miles this side of Fort Laramie, by a party of Sioux Indians. The names of the individuals killed are JAMISON, JAMES, WHEELER and HACKET, four in all. CHARLES A. KINCAID, formerly of this city, was passenger in the mail wagon, and was shot and pierced with four arrows and left for dead. I am not at all satisfied that the Indians were at the bottom of this horrible assassination? The mail bags were cut open and rifled of their contents—an act not likely to be perpetrated by the Indians. Ten thousand five hundred dollars were taken from KINCAID. This is another evidence that white scoundrels were concerned in these murders and robberies. You will remember the fracas which occurred a little time since between some soldiers at Laramie and some of the Sioux Indians. My conjecture is that one or more villains have taken advantage of the Indian propensity to revenge injuries to induce them to murder the mail carriers, so that their white friends could rob the bags of their contents. The mail carriers outward bound found the bodies and the remains of the mail in the hands of the men belonging to DRIPP's party. Meeting there no escort they have returned. Seven mules were driven off and one killed in this skirmishing.

Yours, L.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Chili.

The latest dates from Valparaiso are to the 30th of October.

In Chili the Police and Post-Office Departments were about to be reformed, and a commission was preparing to proceed to England in order, if possible to promote colonization. The silver and copper mines had been very prosperous. It has been ascertained that the late census was very faulty, and that the population is quite 2,000,000, instead of 1,400,000, as stated. Trade was very dull at Valparaiso, but was expected soon to revive.

Bolivia.

The Peruvian papers state that the Congress of Bolivia had authorized BELZU to declare war against Peru, and voted him supplies for eight thousand additional troops for that purpose.

The latest Callao dates are to Nov. 10. There is no news worth printing.

The Cocos Island Treasure.

The capital stock of the company which was fitted out from San Francisco for the purpose of prosecuting a search for a recovery alleged to have been buried on Cocos Island many years since, was $350,000, divided into 22,000 shares, of $2,500 each. The estimated value of the treasure which they seek is $15,000,000. Cocos Island is a small island in the Pacific Ocean, about 750 miles distant, in a southwesterly direction, from Panama. The statements relative to the burial of the treasure in that secluded spot are as follows: In the year 1816, the Mexicans were in a state of revolution against their mother country, Spain. The Spanish Viceroy, alarmed at the bold front of the insurgents, determined to send home for security as many of the Government treasures as possible. To this end he gathered together an immense amount of bullion, jewels and other valuables, and being afraid of the buccaneers of the Caribbean Sea, resolved to send them home by the way of Manilla, and accordingly the treasure was shipped from Acapulco on board a Spanish galleon.

Previous to this Buenos Ayres had also revolted against Spain, and a number of privateers had been fitted out under the Buenos Ayres flag, to prey upon the richly freighted galleons of Spain. One of these privateers doubled Cape Horn. Her crew mutinied, and the captain and officers were put ashore at Valparaiso. The vessel continued on her cruise. After taking several prizes, dissension arose among the men, and sixteen of their number stole away from the rest in one of the captured ships, carrying with them a large amount of the prize money. These sixteen men fell in with and obtained possession of the Spanish galleon which had sailed from Acapulco. They found the amount of treasure on board of her so vast that they determined to secrete the greater part of it, and accordingly buried it on the island. Not long afterwards their vessel was lost, some of the crew captured by a man-of-war, and the rest scattered to the four quarters of the globe.

Being without character, influence or money, none of them were able individually to go in search of the hidden wealth. In 1815 two of them laid the affair before the English Admiralty, but without success. One man, named CHAPLAIN, then addressed himself to private individuals, and succeeded in organizing an expedition. On the way, however, the schooner in which the party sailed was lost off Agua Dulce, on the South America coast. CHAPLAIN was afterwards taken sick and died, but before his death confided to the doctor who attended him, full particulars regarding the capture, value and place of burial of the treasure. According to his account there were buried, besides an immense quantity of silver dollars, chiefly in bags, five hundred boxes of doubloons, one thousand in each box, which would alone make up the enormous sum of eight millions of dollars. Besides this there were gold bars, sword scabbards, watches, chronometers and many rich ornaments studded with precious stones.

All this information, together with many other important details, is in the possession of the commandant of the present expedition. He visited the island many years since, and is familiar with its localities. Of late years he has made several unavailing attempts to find the treasure. A year since he expended all his funds in the purchase of a vessel, but putting into a Spanish American port on the way, his vessel was confiscated. He escaped with the loss of all his property, and upon his return penniless to San Francisco, succeeded in interesting some gentlemen on the subject, and the present expedition was formed. He is said to be a shrewd intelligent sea captain, and the utmost confidence is reposed in his ability to make the wished-for discovery. The schooner Julius Pringle, which was fitted out by the company, sailed from San Francisco on the 22d of August last, and her crew have doubtless, ere this, discovered the treasure, or given up the search.

The proprietor of the Islands, Capt. Ross, died the 20th of May last. About 28 years ago, the Netherlands Government ceded the Islands to Capt. Ross, for valuable services rendered the Dutch, since which period he has been resident there with his family. Capt. Ross died at ten o'clock in the morning of the 20th May, and his wife expired at three o'clock on the afternoon of the same day. Ross was within a few weeks of completing his 70th year.

Great Fire in Baltimore.—Loss $150,000 to $200,000.

From the Baltimore Sun, Dec. 11.

One of the most destructive fires that has occurred in this city for a long time, broke out on Saturday evening last, about 5 o'clock, in the warehouse of J. McGOWAN & SONS, on Gay-street, one door south from Pratt, which, as it was checked, destroyed seven buildings, besides injuring three others to a considerable extent, and causing a loss estimated in the whole at from $150,000 to $200,000.

Owing to the scarcity of water and the fact of the building in which the fire originated containing a large quantity of various kinds of liquors—which greatly added to the progress of the fire—in the short space of one hour from the discovery of the fire, the entire block, from Eutaw-street to Paca, with the exception of the Eutaw House on one side, and the warehouse of CLARK & BRO. on the other, was a mass of ruins, as were also the almost entire contents of the various buildings.

The first building destroyed was occupied by J. McGOWAN & SONS, grocery and liquor dealers. The fire broke out in the third story of their warehouse, and from its timely discovery they were enabled to have removed the refuse some $1,500 worth of their stock, the whole of which they have estimated at from $9,000 to $10,000. They have a policy of insurance in the Baltimore Fire Insurance Company for $6,000. The building was owned by CLARK & BRO., and insured in the Equitable Insurance Company.

The fire then communicated to the warehouse of CLARK & BRO., flour dealers, on the west adjoining, and the building occupied by Messrs. KNABE, GARBLE & Co., piano manufacturers on the east. The loss of CLARK & BROTHER was slight, neither the building or stock sustaining much damage. Messrs. KNABE, GARBLE & Co. suffered considerable loss, amounting as near as we could learn to about $16,000, on which there was an insurance of $6,000. Nearly 100 piano cases were among the property destroyed. This building was owned by Messrs. DEAKELY & FENTON, and insured in the Equitable Insurance Company.

The building next adjoining was occupied by Messrs. NEWMAN & Co., iron railing manufacturers, whose loss in stock is from $5,000 to $6,000, upon which there was no insurance. The building was owned by Messrs. KIMBAL & SONS, and insured in the Equitable Insurance Company. From this the flames communicated to the building adjoining, occupied by Messrs. MILLS & MURRAY as a feed store. They estimate their loss at $3,000, upon which they have a policy for $1,700 in the Firemen's Insurance Company. This building was owned by Messrs. SMITH & NICODEMUS, and also insured in the Equitable Insurance Company.

The next building destroyed was that occupied by Messrs. MILLS & BROTHER, stove and tin-ware manufacturers, who sustained a loss of from $5,000 to $6,000, on which they have an insurance of $1,000 in a New-York office. The building was owned by THOMAS R. MATTHEWS, and insured in the Equitable Insurance Co. Messrs. ROTHROCK & PEACOCK, tinners and roofers, who occupied the next adjoining building, sustained a heavy loss, upon which there was no insurance, their policy upon their stock having expired about one week since. The building was owned by J. HOWARD McHENRY, Esq., and covered by insurance in the Equitable Insurance Co.

The foregoing were all four story buildings. From these the fire communicated to two one-story buildings, occupied by Mr. CASPER, cedar cooper; and Mr. OSLER, tin ware manufacturer, the first of whom sustained a slight loss, with no insurance. The loss of OSLER was also trifling, and he is insured in the Baltimore Insurance Company. The heat from the building occupied by Mr. McGOWAN & SONS, fired that in the rear, fronting on Pacastreet, and occupied by Messrs. KAHLER & MESSERSMITH, flour, grain, and feed dealers, but it was extinguished before much damage was done. One end of their warehouse was store in by the falling of the rear warehouses on Baltimore street. They estimated their loss in grain destroyed and damaged, and injury to building, at from $2,000 to $3,000, which is covered by insurance in the Baltimore Fire Insurance Company. A stable adjoining was also slightly damaged by fire.

The fine hotel known as the Eutaw House, it was thought, would also fall a prey to the fury of the devouring element, but it was saved by tearing away from adjoining it all combustible material, and keeping it constantly saturated with water. As to the origin of the fire all

NEW-YORK CITY.

GEOGRAPHICAL.

American Geographical and Statistical Society.

Mr. J. G. Kohl on American Maps.

On Thursday evening at the New-York University the American Geographical and Statistical Society held its regular monthly meeting. Hon. George Bancroft, President, occupied the Chair. After some unimportant business by the Council, the Society went into session. The Secretary acknowledged donations to its Library within the past month of several valuable works presented by Senator Fish of New-York, and Prof. Henry of the Smithsonian Institute.

Hiram Barney, Esq., offered the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the President of this Society be requested to prepare a petition to be signed by himself and the other officers, praying Congress to instruct and empower the Secretary of the Navy to fit out an expedition next Spring consisting of a propeller and a store ship, fully officered, manned and equipped, for the purpose, intended chartering and purchasing such vessels, if necessary, to search for and relieve Commander Kane and his party, who were detached by the United States Government in the Spring of 1853 to make executive and geographical explorations within the Arctic Circle, and whose absence is prolonged beyond the anticipated term.

Remarks were made by several persons, showing the deepest interest in the welfare of Commander Kane and his companions. Mr. Grinnell, who was in attendance, to numerous inquiries as to the latest intelligence received from the expedition, could only answer that he was unable to communicate anything beyond what was already known. The evening preamble and resolution was read by S. Dewitt Bloodgood, Esq.

Whereas, The many fatal and recent disasters by shipwreck on the coast of New-York and New-Jersey, have excited the deepest interest and sympathy in the public mind, and as the life-saving establishments and stations now existing under the patronage of the merchants of this City and of Congress are not organized under a general responsible head;

Resolved, That the Society respectfully memorialize the Honorable the Secretary of the Treasury in favor of the appointment of a general agent who shall have the supervision and control of the life-saving establishments, their separation and management, under the instruction of the department, to the end that the system may be thoroughly organized, not only for the sake of humanity and the interests of commerce, but also for the purpose of obtaining facts, estimates and tables, important in their connection with the subject of commercial statistics.

Mr. Bloodgood accompanied the resolution with explanatory remarks respecting the present lamentable deficiency in the life-saving establishments on our coast. "The system, he said, was not thorough. There were only twenty-seven in all, and besides being universally ill furnished and ineffective, they had no definite combined head to report to. He thought this effected, as contemplated in the resolution, would bring about the needed reform. The resolution was referred to the Council.

The Society proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year, with the following result:

President—Francis L. Hawks, D. D. Vice-President—Henry Grinnell, M. F. Maury, L. L. D., U. S. N., Alexander H. Bradford. Treasurer—Ridley Watts. Recording Secretary—Archibald Russell. Domestic Corresponding Secretary—Henry V. Poor. Foreign Corresponding Secretary—S. DeWitt Bloodgood. Librarian—M. Dudley Bean. Council—I. Romeyn Broadhead, Henry E. Pierrepont, Hiram Barney, John D. Jones, Cambridge Livingston, John Jay, Marshall Lefferts, R. A. Whitehouse.

Mr. Barnard, accompanied with brief and fitting remarks, tendered his resignation of the position he had so long held as presiding officer of the society. Resolutions were passed regretting his declination of re-election and thanks for the able manner he had discharged the incumbent duties of his position.

MR. KOHL ON AMERICAN MAPS.

The society was now entertained by a long and able paper read by Mr. J. G. Kohl, the distinguished traveler and historian. The subjects it embraced were of vast scope and of special interest to the geographical student. It was mainly descriptive of a journey through portions of Europe and Asia. He accompanied the same with maps—over twelve hundred in number—showing the geographical condition of many portions of this country, visited by him, as they were centuries ago, and as gathered from careful study of earliest maps. We give briefly some of the more interesting facts.

The original design, Mr. Kohl said, which led to his having accumulated so large a collection of maps as that he had the honor to lay before their body, was to enable him to write a comprehensive history of the progressive discovery of America from the earliest to the latest times, and procuring for such a work a solid basis, so far as cartography can give such a basis. These researches, he said, had to be commenced in Europe, while they could only be finished in America. All the first reports and maps of America, he said, were sent over to Europe and deposited in the archives and libraries of the Old Countries, where will be found the original of every document which time has left undestroyed—the most precious manuscripts and the rarest prints appertaining to this continent.

Mr. Kohl began his collection of maps, he said, in his own native country, Germany. From the first, he alleged, Germany took not a small part in the work of the discovery of America. Columbus himself received light from German astronomers. Magellan and other Spanish discoverers were accompanied by German adventurers, who, afterwards returning to their country, became authors and map-makers. A great part of South America was given by the Emperor to the merchants of Augsburg, and they sent their captains and agents to explore and conquer it. The King of Spain, Charles I, who was also Emperor of Germany, resided often on the Rhine and Danube, and received here the reports and maps of his conquerors and explorers. The printing-press, a German invention, was nowhere more eager and active than there to echo and copy, to translate and preserve the reports of the New World. What is more, at the end of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries, nearly half of all the owners and mechanics of printing establishments throughout the whole of Europe were Germans. These and other circumstances, he stated, explained the fact that we find American historical and geographical documents dispersed over the whole of Germany. Nuremburg, for instance has that famous globe drawn by the hand of the illustrious Knight, Governor and Navigator Behaim, which is so very valuable, because we possess in it one of those representations by which Columbus traced his course through the ocean westward. Weimar has the original of that most precious map of America, which was presented to the Emperor Charles V. by the Spanish cosmopolite, Ribeiro, and which is cotemporary with the discovery of Peru. Pizarro's first excursions are painted upon it. After citing numerous other additional facts of similar character and interest relative to Germany, Mr. Kohl directed the attention of those present to the extensive map collection of France bearing upon the same important subject; more especially as connected with North America. Paris he mentioned as containing three very extensive depositories of maps: the great Imperial Library, the richest of the world; the Dépôt de la Marine, and the Dépôt de la Guerre. There were also, he said, rich collections to be found in some of the old French seaports: Dieppe, St. Malo, La Rochelle, and others which sent in early times to America so many vessels, pirates and Canadian conquerors. Many great families retained in their castles often most splendid collections of private maps.

The British Museum, London, was described as inconceivably rich in its amassed treasures of maps; the catalogue alone of the manuscript maps filling three large octavo volumes. Among these were old Greek, Arabian and Italian maps, illustrating the ideas of the learned on the construction of the world before Columbus. Included in the list are also many of the oldest Spanish and Portuguese discovery maps. But we cannot follow Mr. Kohl in his explorations among libraries and private collections of Europe, interesting as they were.

The exhibition of general maps of the world, made before the discovery of Columbus, displayed in this collection by Mr. Kohl, were of most entertaining character, as showing the state then of cosmographic knowledge and conception, and the anxiety mapmakers displayed to harmonize the systems prevalent, previous and subsequent to the time of Columbus. Old prejudices were slow in giving way to new truths.

Some interesting remarks were here most happily introduced touching the condition of the cosmographic art in the middle ages; the monks, the ecclesiastical writers, and others of the early period of the middle ages he stated as having devoted much attention to cosmography and mapmaking. Their maps are to be found dispersed in many old manuscripts, sometimes annexed to bibles, and sometimes to copies of old Greek and Roman geographies. In the most barbarous period of the middle ages the Arabs numbered among themselves many distinguished geographers. Their maps, to some considerable extent, were copied in the Oriental countries. After the Arabs, commerce and art flourished in Italy. In the latter centuries of the middle ages, most beautiful maps of the world were made in Venice, Geneva, Florence, &c. In Sicily, the Bohemian Islands, in Spain and Portugal, mapmaking became, with the extension of navigation and commerce, a more and more general study and occupation, so that many, and even Columbus himself, got a livelihood by it. Some of these maps will be found in every library throughout the whole of Europe. It is highly entertaining to observe, as shown by the class of maps here exhibited, the various discoveries as they progressed—how island after island became known, and how the knowledge of that ocean which was called by the Arabs and Europeans the "Waters of Darkness" extended by degrees towards the West. A most remarkable feature upon these maps is the appearance of the fabulous island, Antilia, and in which may be seen the first dawn of America itself. The "collection" also showed how varying were the ideas of geographers as to the configuration of the northwestern countries of Scandinavia, Britannica, Iceland, Greenland, &c. Very often, and for a long time, Greenland and other parts of America were put down as appendices of Europe. It was not even till some centuries after Columbus that all these cosmographic follies and errors were corrected, and the great gulf which here separates the two continents was clearly shown and discovered.

Behrings Straits formed the subject of quite prolonged remarks. The question as to the early passage of this Strait by the Chinese and Japanese and their settlement of America he had tried to get some light on from old Chinese and Japanese maps. There is no doubt of the passage, and their knowledge thus derived of a distant large Eastern country. From these same parts also set out in later times a segregate discovery of America by Europeans, that by the Russians, which we call an American discovery from the West, as the one by the Spaniards we call one from the East. The early ideas and speculations of cosmographers on this part of the world were represented as extremely contradictory and fanciful. Imaginary continental bridges extending from one country to the other were laid down. On some maps will be such bridge laid out, over which is written, "Over this bridge the ten lost Israelitic tribes marched from Asia to America." But map-makers who adopted such a bridge found it necessary to support the theory that the American Indians descended from the Jews.

Mr. Kohl protracted his remarks further upon this subject.

The attention of the Geographical Society was now called to the concluding subject of Mr. Kohl's paper—his collection of American maps. This collection was very numerous, and those giving the earliest supposed geographical outlines of this continent commanded special attention, as showing the many curious and erroneous impressions under which geographers then labored. America was at first presented as a great peninsula of Asia, mixed up, and joined with Japan, China, &c. Maps were shown in which China is in the closest neighborhood to Mexico, on which the great Rio Colorado of California takes its source in Siberia, and where the Tartars and their horses and camels are represented about the Rocky Mountains. A Chinese was also shown with his yellow shoes and trowsers, and pointed bonnet, standing upright in the midst of the Appalachian Mountains, and not far from him the portrait of an elephant. Further maps showed that by degrees America disjoins herself from Asia. Japan keeps on the march to the West, and the Tartars, Chinese, and elephants by and by disappear. Similar and not less interesting changes, errors and gradual rectifications, were shown as great traditional continents, keeping their ground for fifty years or more and then shrinking away to small islands; unnatural prolongations of the coast meeting away, &c. But even these blunders, he thought, should not be regarded as insignificant or despicable, as in philosophy and science they were only links in the great chain of events. With the assistance of his map, Mr. Kohl thus led his hearers to the study and contemplation of the myriad geographical changes in the American Continent—giving many facts of great interest relative to its rivers and mountains, closing with a concise delineation of the general past addition of this vast realm and its progress and destiny. He was listened to throughout with marked attention.

CHLOROFORM AND ETHER.

Case of Stephen T. Beale—Second Meeting of Dentists.

A second meeting of the Dentists of New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburg and Jersey City was held on Friday, at the Dental Academy, Bond-street. A large number of the Dental profession were in attendance, and Dr. C. C. Allen was called to preside. The object of the meeting was briefly stated by the Chairman, as being a further scientific discussion of the same subject that was considered at the previous meeting—the effect of ether and chloroform as anæsthetic agents to produce vagaries in the minds of those taking them, and the bearing of such facts upon the case of Dr. Beale.

Dr. Ambler offered a resolution to the purport that it was inexpedient for the dentists of New-York and vicinity composing the meeting to express an opinion either for or against the innocence or guilt of Dr. Beale. Remarks were made by Drs. Ambler, Gunning and Scoville, strongly urging the passage of the resolution, on the ground that it was better Philadelphia dentists should take the lead in a matter bearing so closely upon their interests—that it was impertinent New-York dentists, as a body, should interfere, and especially to influence Executive power, and that such course would operate prejudicial rather than benefit Dr. Beale.

Replies ensued by several in opposition to the resolution contending that New-York dentists, and all dentists, were deeply interested in the case of Dr. Beale, as bearing upon their own reputations and position, and that, besides being a humanitary act simply toward Dr. Beale, it was a duty owing to the public to make known the facts proposed to be elicited that they may urge the propriety and degree of safety or danger in permitting further administration to themselves of ether and chloroform. The resolution or motion was laid on the table.

The Chairman now announced that in compliance with the call of the meeting, they would proceed to hear such statements as any present might have to give, the result of professional experience and observation as to the effects to produce vagaries of mind of ether and chloroform. In consideration of the large number present it was moved that those only not in attendance at the previous meeting are called upon to give statements, and that they confine themselves to facts bearing direct upon the case of Dr. Beale. To facilitate expedition, the names were called in alphabetical order. The first statement offered was by Dr. Allen, the President, as follows. His administration of ether and chloroform, he said, was extensively limited; he had given them to children mainly and to some adults. He was unable to state any case in his experience bearing for or against the case of Dr. Beale. He had never known a patient conscious of what was going on; that was not capable of physical assistance.

Dr. Blaisdell gave his experience in the use of ether and chloroform as being very extensive. He had spent some years in the Hospitals of New-Orleans and Mobile. He had often administered ether or chloroform to twenty patients in a day. Some under their effect were passive, and some exceedingly violent. Strange hallucinations were often shown. Ladies not unfrequently showed evidences of strong amorous feeling—would hang about the neck and kiss the operator. He gave an instance where a lady thought improper liberties had been taken, and she continued to think so to this day. He remarked he was not surprised when he heard of Dr. Beale's case. His own observation convinced him it would be difficult to dispel the pervading impression produced on the mind while under the effect of ether or chloroform.

Dr. Curtis read a letter from Dr. Clark, of Newark, N. J., detailing the influence of ether in two cases, as recently administered by him. One of these was that of a patient who strided violently across the room, vociferating that the extraction of his teeth hurt him very much, when not a tooth had been touched. The other was that of a patient labouring under an attack of delirium tremens. He thought that the operator had subjected him to a long and severe rate, and the latter stated it was impossible to make him believe otherwise.

Dr. Covitat stated that he inhaled ether was administered to Miss Hudson, and as the design of the meeting was to hear statements showing similar effect and vagary of mind in others, and the consequent degree of reliability to be given to Miss Hudson's testimony, as influenced by the administration of this agent, he thought it best, as bearing more directly upon the case of Dr. Beale, that the Dentists present, in detailing the facts of their experience, should give the greatest possible prominency to the effects of ether. It was well known, he said, by the dental profession that the effects of ether and chloroform were different. Chloroform was more exhilirating. As for his own experience he had never met with such strongly marked cases as were specified by some at the last meeting, or as shown in the statements of one or two who had preceded him. One thing he might say, no two were seldom affected alike. He had given ether in some cases when not a single external expression would be manifest, but perfectly subdued and unconscious. They would be like a dead person, and for the time could have no knowledge of what was passing. Others, again, would be less influenced; the extent depending of course upon the degree of exhilaration, but uniformly on extraction of the teeth, consciousness would return. He had never, however, witnessed anything either in the conduct of lady or gentleman during the least approach to impropriety. He mentioned the case of a young lady who was put under the influence of ether to have a tooth extracted; she was perfectly resistless of effort, experienced not the slightest pain, and to all external seeming was perfectly unconscious—yet a remark he made to a person present, in a very low whisper on the point of pulling the tooth was distinctly remembered.

Dr. Coleman said he administered ether three or four months after his introduction, and then abandoned it. He was not aware of any case in his own practice of hallucination of mind remaining after the effects of ether had passed away. Ladies had, however, often acted extremely ridiculous. As to the case of Dr. Beale, he deemed the result of the trial grossly unjust. Miss Hudson he considered an irrational witness, and that Dr. Beale never should have been convicted on her testimony alone uncorroborated by the testimony of any other.

Relative to any expression of feeling or proposed conduct to relieve their brother Dentist, he sincerely hoped those who could not cooperate in such course would at the least, refrain from being anything hostile.

Dr. Forbes coincided with the views expressed by Dr. Clark, as to the injustice of the verdict found against Dr. Beale. He thought, however, Dr. Beale committed a very great error in administering ether without assistance. For himself, he was happy to state he used neither ether or chloroform. One year's experience satisfied him that the end did not justify the means. Death was known occasionally to result from this administration. As illustration of the danger the dentist stood in, of having attributed to himself the cause of a patient's death from the administration of ether, he cited a case in his own practice, of a lady for whom he inserted a set of teeth. Subsequent to the insertion of the teeth, she called, twice or thrice, to have some trifling alterations made. After the last visit, when he had completed the necessary alterations, she started to go to her home in Brooklyn, and on her way was struck with paralysis, and died. He had no doubt, if he had administered, in this case, ether or chloroform, he would have been chargeable with her death. A case of a young lady was mentioned by Dr F., illustrating what is thought, though not in point, as vital in its nature, and of the utmost importance to the dental profession in respect to unjust suspicions that might be thrown against them, from peculiarly ludicrous predicaments they may happen to be placed in, in the administration of ether and chloroform. The case was this: It was she first time he had administered ether to the lady in question. He found she was easily influenced—remarkably so—but, as the result proved, obstinate in recovery. She had rush of blood to the head, countenance became livid, with other painful symptoms. He was obliged to take her in his arms and lay her on the sofa, and in order to restore her to consciousness, open her dress, which, as it happened, opened in front. These facts in connection with the circumstance that no third party was in attendance at the time, would, he thought, if any one in the land inclined to be suspicious, had entered as that article, certainly have been the subject of his vagaries. Professor Gies, not a practicing dentist, but had administered frequently ether and chloroform in difficult obstetric cases. He had witnessed hallucinations but they were never permanent—often there would be no sensibility to the pain of labor and stilly unconsciousness be uninterrupted—again, sensibility would remain and no consciousness.

Dr. Griswold, of Williamsburg, stated he had been in the habit of administering ether for eight years past. He mentioned the fact of having given it not long since to a very powerful athletic man, the owner of a distillery in New-York. The patient, he said, labored after till insensibility was produced, when all at once he started up like a complete maniac—fists clenched—pupils dilated—and giving utterance to most violent and profane language. Upon returning to consciousness it seems he thought he was in his distillery, and that one of his workmen had through carelessness produced some disarrangement of the machinery, and that he was swearing at the confounded blockhead. Had he not been convinced by the fact of finding himself in the dentist's office, and that no such accident as he supposed took place at his distillery he would have believed it a reality; it could not have been more real. He mentioned the case of a young lady who, under the influence of chloroform showed striking symptoms of affection, throwing her arms about his neck and endeavoring to pull his head down so that she might kiss him. Another lady patient he recollected throwing up her legs with other indecorous manifestations.

Dr Kingsley had administered ether or chloroform but seldom, and never only when a physician was in attendance. He had never witnessed any hallucination. He would be exceedingly loth, he said, to receive the testimony of a witness as to what transpired while under the influence of ether or chloroform.

Dr. Lord had given ether to fifty patients, never saw evidence of amorous excitement, had witnessed hallucination—some thought they were sailing, some riding, others again that they were suspended in the air.

Dr. Marvin, of Brooklyn, stated that the general effect of chloroform in cases in which he had administered it, was perfect stupefaction and insensibility. He told the case of a young lady who showed unequivocal signs of amorousness. She was easily brought under subjection, but the effect was unusually transient. In the case of a man under the effect of ether, revelations, he stated, were made which the patient doubtless would have preferred to have kept to himself. He thought he was engaged at cards—got very angry thinking he was losing—pulled off his coat, and, the Doctor said, began pitching into him. He insisted all his teeth should be pulled, and said he would give $100 a tooth. Such volley of oaths as he uttered he had never heard before or since. In another case a lady had eleven teeth to be extracted. It took a large quantity of chloroform to effect her. After the first three teeth he was obliged to repeat the administration in each successive tooth before extraction. She screamed most violently. She thought we had her head squeezed in between the hinges of a gate, and were pounding her—and that afterwards we threw her among a drove of cattle, and that they were hooking her to death. For two weeks she said on retiring she would see the gate and cattle.

Dr. Main had given ether and chloroform in a large number of cases. Hallucination of some kind was a frequent attendant. He cited several instances—the first, Dr. Thayer, of Twenty-sixth-street, who did several teeth extracted, and after the operation presented ten of him $10 each. He thought he had been driving the chariot drawn by four gray horses at the Empire-drome and had beat the black horses, and that he was winner of $10, having bet that amount. Another case, Isaac Bronson, of New-York, thought he was driving his fast team, cating, smoking and drinking. Another thought he had been locked up in the Tombs and wanted the Doctor to go his bail. Another, Mr. James, of No. 89 Bond-street, thought he was taking supper at Keeff's—smashed a bottle or two, and had a general good time—but thought it was worth the money. Another case, a lady now married, to whom he had given ether twice before and three times after marriage, he mentioned as having labored under a rather curious delusion. When she was single she thought she was married and had a baby, now that she is married and has a baby, she thinks herself single and having no baby. Another lady thought she had been riding on the Stoningtonian road with her husband, that the carriage was upset, and one of her limbs fractured. A boy thought that he was fishing. A lady thought she was buying new shoes. A woman, whose limb was being amputated, thought she was eating cake. Another thought she was planting flowers. An Irish girl, a Catholic, pronounced the priest and her religion a humbug. Dr. M. regretted that the unfortunate position of a brother dentist should alone seemingly have rendered necessary a statement of such facts as were being made. He considered them, aside from their special intended bearing upon the case of Dr. Beale, of highest importance, and might be connected with physiological science. As deciding the question of hallucination, they were facts that could not be got over.

Dr. Rogers had administered chloroform frequently, but always made it a point to have some one present. Never saw anything like indecorousness, except, perhaps, in one case, very slight manifestations. These cases he had had of hallucination, but returning consciousness immediately dissipated them. Chloroform he did not think acted upon the reproductive organs.

Dr. Rick mentioned the case of a young lady attended by her brother. She had a remarkably fine head of hair, and insisted that her brother plaited up a quantity of it while she was under the effects of ether. She thinks so to this day. In another case, a young lady had a tooth to be extracted. When, through inhalation of ether, she had become unconscious, the mother suggested, instead of extraction, killing the nerve by means of a red hot wire, a mode then quite frequent. The young lady, at the suggestion, rose in her seat and protested against it. Her tooth was taken out with no sensible pain. He knew a gentleman's wife, under the influence of ether, thought he was in heaven, and described the glorious visions he saw. As far as his observation went, there was always a loss of consciousness before a loss of muscular power. The Doctor remarked it singular that not an instance had been given of males being amorously excited as well as females.

Dr. J. W. Smith, of Brooklyn, said he was one of those fools who were foolish enough to try the right of administering ether. He had not paid for using chloroform, but he had used it notwithstanding. Chloroform, he said, quieted the patient less than ether, and was more difficult to control.

He cited the following testimony as bearing under his experience. A very large, strong man from ether to have a tooth extracted. After the operation he walked violently across the room and made efforts to strike the Doctor. As he could not get near enough to the Doctor to do this, he struck against the wall with all his might, whereupon remarkable cure was instantaneously restored. A lady was impressed with the belief that she was in a flower garden. It could not have been more natural if it was real. Two years since an intimate acquaintance and friend of the Doctor, to whom he had administered ether, upon coming to consciousness insisted he had been in Hell. The idea became so firmly impressed that he could not dispel it. It continued to haunt him, till at length his mind and reason became affected and he is now, in consequence, in a Lunatic Asylum. A lady, he said, showed strong amorous excitement—pursued him from room to room, and was exceedingly profane and obscene in her language. But there were some cases he would not make public; they were too sacred for publication. The Doctor further mentioned a case told him by his former partner, Dr. Burgess, in which ether produced undoubted effect upon the genital organs. He knew the patient referred to personally, and the utmost reliance could be placed upon the statement of Dr. Burgess, as most present acquainted with him could testify. He would not give the particulars of the case, but simply mention the fact as a fact of unquestioned genital excitement, unknown by ether; not that such has a specific effect of this character to agent, but that this effect in some instances was produced; and that if one such should be shown, Dr Beale should be pardoned.

Dr Smith said the effects of ether and chloroform, as adduced from his experience, went various—some were passive, some pugnacious, and some amorous. A married lady, with whom he was scarcely acquainted, the moment she quaffed inhalation, threw her arms about his neck, and declared she had loved him for years. In another case, a lady of full pathetic habit, he extracted fifteen teeth, giving chloroform. That evening, after having gone to bed, she got up, and, in her night-clothes, went to open a fire, and was making herself very useful in inciting the firemen to a consciousness of their duty. The doctor stated he had discarded the use of anæsthetic agents.

Dr Woodbridge, experience limited, never would give ether or chloroform if he could avoid it, and then only in the presence of a third party.

The statements being noted, a resolution was offered by Dr. Burdell, that the physicians, surgeons and dentists present would not believe a witness who was under the influence of ether or chloroform as to the facts sworn to take place, unless corroborated by other testimony.

Dr. Ambler proposed a substitute, declaring that any expression of opinion on their part, as a collective body, was not then expedient.

Remarks were made by several favoring the resolution, and by others favoring the substitute. Upon suggestion, however, by the Chair, that from the division of feeling and sentiment evident in the meeting, if the resolution was passed, a remonstrance would doubtless be got up, both resolution and substitute were laid on the table.

On motion the meeting adjourned, when a petition for Dr. Beale offered for signatures received many additional names.

TRIAL FOR DIVORCE.

Case of Frances L. Childs vs Solomon Childs.

SUPREME COURT—Circuit.

Before His Hon. Judge Roosevelt.

TENTH DAY—Monday, Dec. 11.

The Court room was crowded yesterday morning at the opening of Court, it being understood that Mr. Jordan would deliver his argument in behalf of the defendant.

Mrs. Childs, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Simpson, and a lady friend, appeared in Court. Mr. Childs was not present.

Mr. Jordan announced to the Court that the two remaining brothers of the defendant, Jacob and Joseph Childs were in the City, having arrived from Cincinnati, and he asked that they be admitted to testify upon the single point as to whether they were ever in Belle Forrest's house or not.

The Court deemed the evidence inadmissible at this stage, and Mr. Jordan commenced his ARGUMENT FOR THE DEFENSE.

After awarding deserved encomium to the Jury for their remarkable patience and attention manifested throughout a trial involving most protracted and enormously complicated details, and having congratulated them on the promise of speedy termination of their long pilgrimage, Mr. Jordan expressed the hope that the trial, protracted as it has been, and however hostile, seemingly, was the attitude of the contestant parties—would eventuate—and he believed it would—in the fates of these parties being yet united in all the fond and loving endearment of former years. Such a consummation he said would be effected upon the proud heart of the wife and family interposed to prevent it. He alluded to the nature of the suit, as differing in a very important essential from other suits. In most suits, parties could do as they please; could withdraw or compromise, but in this it was beyond their control. The law of God and the law of man made it so. Nothing short of direct proof of adultery was sufficient to justify the separation of the parties. The general welfare of society required it should be thus established, and that for every little miff of parties living in the marriage relation, they should not be allowed to dissolve those bonds. With the Jury, therefore, was left the decision whether adultery, as alleged against one of these parties, had been proven, or whether it was simply a prejudice on the other side—poisoned words—a bitterness, the result of family pride. If the Jury, as sober-minded men, retuned to grant a decree of divorce, he firmly believed Frances L. Childs would return to her husband and live with him in uninterrupted happiness in future. If only Solomon Simpson and the other Simpsons could be kept out of the way. But if a divorce was given, and if the plaintiff ever loved Solomon Childs, her life hereafter would be one of unquiet rest, and her pillow a pillow of thorns.

Mr. Jordan directed the attention of the Jury to the charge brought against the defendant, that of abandonment. What he had to commit under this head, as also his entire presentation, he would take occasion in the outset to say he hoped to do with a degree of candor, a calmness and clearness that would meet their approbation, and with none of that furious spirit with which he feared counsel on the opposite side had anticipated he would show on this occasion. The parties in question, he said, were married in New-York, in the spring of 1850. Solomon Childs was at that time purchasing partner of a large house in Cincinnati, and reputed to be rich. He got acquainted with this lady, and they courted and were married. Happiness was theirs. On one side a bride young, loving, intelligent, cherished as a gem taken from the diadem of an angel—on the other side a man not much her senior in years—a man of good habits, good principles, a warm, loving heart, widely known and supposed to be wealthy. The first day that dawned upon them was as bright as the first day that dawned upon Pompeii, and almost as fatal as the last day that shed its dim lustre over that doomed city. If you give that verdict now which is to crush him, he had better have gone to his grave than on the morning of his marriage entered the solemn portals of the synagogue. A few weeks passed—weeks of mighty and potent charge. No one could tell the perfectness of mind enjoyed by Solomon Childs in these few weeks—his anxiety, how intensely his heart was wrung with painful foreboding. His house was on the eve of passing from affluence to destitution. How this anticipation preyed upon his temper God only knows. But one morning his wife leaves him, and says to her father, if we believe Solomon Simpson and her counsel, she left because they had had a violent quarrel. But did they separate, and how long? Is that the abandonment they claim? He would not go through, he said, the scenes at the office, where the old man got so excited, he would have stained his hand with blood. What did they do. Solomon apologized through his brother, William. All was made up, and they lived together again with all the affection of turtle doves. Next we find Solomon Childs about to take his young wife to Cincinnati on a tour of pleasure to introduce her to his family. Was there opposition? Did father, mother or brother interpose an objection? No, all hitherings were at an end. It was an unhallowed touch that undertook to alienate them after this. Mrs. Childs remained there with her husband some weeks. The scenes she found with Cincinnati was, it was not gay enough. There was no Opera, nor places of amusement. What was Mrs. Childs then? a young gay girl not yet initiated into the grave duties of a matron. Do we find any abandonment up to this time? Mr and Mrs. Childs go to New-York. She tells Mr. Harnburger, prior to leaving, that she is going to be absent two or three weeks, when she would again return. Did she return? In other words, let us see when and how and on whose side the abandonment took place. The facts are briefly these. Shortly after, coming to the City, she informed Childs Brothers, Cincinnati, telegraph to Solomon Childs of their failure. The gloomy cloud, long pending, had finally burst. He was obliged immediately to repair to Cincinnati. She would not go with him. Mr. Childs went back alone, little dreaming that a darker, more crushing cloud was gathering over his head—little thinking that that separation which he dreamed was to be of short duration, was doomed to a long, a bitter, and a permanent one. Two letters are received from his wife, none other the importunate that then her letters stop. Meanwhile Solomon Childs writes to his wife letters breathing only of affection and love, and in all regretting that the nature of his business prevented him from returning to her. Worn down with the harassments of business, his health impaired, he goes to a Water Cure Establishment, in June, 1851, hoping to establish his health. In a few weeks he returns, but nothing to yet heard from his wife; not a line, or a message, or an inquiry. He writes to her again—waits for an answer—none comes—and he writes a second time. A letter does come—not from her; but in the Fall of 1851, a cool, condescending note from her father, asking for money—more money. I ask the Jury, said the counsel, pausing to look at this a moment, to consider this note defending money—one another to in the bearing upon the events immediately preceding, and their connection. Mrs. Childs has told her in Cincinnati the danger of a failure of the house of Childs Brothers. She leaves that city with her husband, declaring her intention to return. She does not return, and why not. The house fails—Mr. Childs goes back to see if anything can be saved from his wrecked fortune—but Mr. Childs, the broken merchant, to put in escape of the Simpson family and their proud daughter—the Solomon Childs, the man of wealth; his letters to his loving wife no longer elicit reply—a bitter, drooping, heartbroken man is. All the response they get, asking money. Is not this evidence of abandonment on her part stood proved and undeniable? Solomon Childs immediately subsequent to this, was filed, embarks for Europe; he tarried for going to Havre, Antwerp, Rotterdam, Paris; he talked of going to Egypt, to Jerusalem, he didn't care where. His mind was distracted—his heart torn—he cared not whither or where he went, or what became of him.

The counsel, after further remarks, showing as he alleged from the evidence, the clearest proof that there was this an abandonment on the part of the defendant, but abandonment, if any, on the part of the wife, next end of the attention of the Jury to the main issue of the case—the charge of adultery against Solomon Childs.

He cited further rules of law, which he desired the Court to announce to the Jury, that where adultery is charged to procure divorce, it is not expected the accusing party will give direct evidence of the fact of adultery, but the testimony must be such as will justify the inference of undoubted adulterous conduct.

The counsel now proceeded to examine the evidence of Belle Forrest, Emily Moore, Josephine Rose, Solomon Simpson, Alexander Delzell, Winston, and others, as to the charge of adultery as brought against the defendant. Belle Forrest, he said, was the only witness, of the entire number adduced, who testified to a single fact that went to show the commission of the act alleged. In the first place, she says she is intimately acquainted with Solomon Childs, and that he visited her house in Cincinnati frequently for two years, with the exception of the interval he was abroad in Europe. She went to Cincinnati, it appears, in May, 1850, and lived there till June, 1852. Solomon Childs went there with his wife in June, 1850, was sick three weeks, and in all with the time that passed before he certainly recovered his health, it must have been five months after going there, before he could have gone to Belle Forrest's.

How did she happen to know him so intimately? She had seen him at his store, knew the three brothers also, and yet after words when asked the name of the younger brother, gives it as William. It shows she knew but little about what she was testifying. William frequently a frequent visitor at her house. She further says Solomon Childs on his return from Europe called on Emily Moore, and stopped with her an week, subsequently, it appears, returned in May, 1851, while Belle Forrest, it seems, sold out her place in Western-row in January, 1851. Here is a discrepancy fatal to her testimony, which is an utter impossibility. Another single fact, she says she said her name in Cincinnati to Mrs. Winston, a constable testifies to professional acquaintance on his part when she received, "Falsus in uno, Falsus in omnibus," is a law maxim, and it holds prominently good in the case of Belle Forrest.

With Emily Moore and Josephine Rose the counsel went on to show it was only a matter of identity. Depositions made by these parties, subsequent to the one offered by the prosecution, show that when Solomon Childs was presented to them that he was not the man they had called and referred to as Solomon Childs. Such evidence, therefore, falls to the ground. They had never seen Solomon Childs previous to the time he was brought in their presence for identification. As to Delzell, continued the counsel, he only swears he saw the defendant at Belle Forrest's, and that only once—he saw him doing nothing, only walking about. He would leave it to the Jury, he said, to decide as to the degree of credibility to be given to the evidence of this witness, in consideration of the conflicting opinions of witnesses brought to testify as to his character. But his testimony would prove nothing against the defendant if believed.

Mr. Jordan then reviewed the testimony relative to the visit to Belle Forrest's house in Crosby-street last year. He said that Belle Forrest, and all of the witnesses for the defence testified emphatically as to the fact, except in relation to the identity of the person whom she saw. She states it was Solomon—they swearing it was William. In her testimony upon this point Belle Forrest had committed rank perjury unless it be regarded that she was honestly mistaken. The counsel then reviewed the evidence of Solomon Simpson at considerable length, he contending that he had been the chief agent in getting up this case. He urged that the history of Simpson's visit to Cincinnati when he saw Solomon Childs in Belle Forrest's house was in the details most improbable. It was impossible to read that from the manner in which the doors were situated, that Solomon could have seen into the front room on the right hand side in the manner he had sworn. The counsel said that from the evidence, it appeared that Simpson had done his best to confound the two brothers, William and Solomon, in the mind of Emily Moore, so that she could swear to the presence of Solomon in her house instead of William. He had bought the evidence of Delzell, by a fifty dollars which was proven in evidence, and how many more fifty's it was not in his power to say. Delzell, he contended, was at best a drunken gambler, though a man concealing originally a good hearty heart. With reference to Winston's explanation of his expressed wish to Wm. Childs to get his brother Solomon to write to his wife and explain why he did not come to her, the counsel said it was improbable, as in the letters of Solomon Childs to his wife, he stated the reason why he did not come to her, and that was the necessity of his remaining West on account of business, and which necessity she recognized and acknowledged in her letters to him.

Mr. Jordan then proceeded to examine the testimony of Winston. He said that the fact that Winston had made a mistake in supposing Solomon was present at the Irving House on Monday week, when it was William he saw there, it being proven by the employés of the American Hotel in Jersey City, by Mr. Hamburger, who was with him until 11 o'clock on that day, and, by Mr. Greer, from 11 to 12 o'clock, then that was sufficient to discredit Winston's recollection of the identity of the person he saw at Belle Forrest's house two years ago.

The counsel, having completed a review of the testimony, before entering upon his concluding remarks, took occasion to pronounce an appropriate and glowing eulogium upon the late and lamented Judge Sandford, who he said he well knew, lost his life in the unfortunate disaster of the Arctic. He, it was, he said, who was engaged upon the present case, and but for his untimely death would have been here to-day to ask in behalf of this defendant. He regretted having been called to the case at so late a day, and especially to fill the place made vacant by the death of such a man.

In closing, the counsel pointed out to the Jury the results resultant upon the verdict they might render. If a divorce was not decreed, he believed the parties could live together amicably. If Frances had returned with Solomon to Cincinnati, instead of refusing to do so, he would have provided for her as a dutiful and loving husband. The opera, the ball, the ride, would, in time, in sight of higher duties, have lost their attraction. The proceedings under such a verdict, in Cincinnati, for a divorce in that State, would be stayed. What had been done would not be regarded as dust in the balance. She, furthermore, had been present through this trial, and he was glad of it. He did not believe she could—however much friends, by whispering tongues, may have to forfeit her to that belief—even in the light of the testimony given, think him guilty of adultery. His character in this trial had come out spotless and pure.

If you, he, he concluded, grant a decree of divorce, you make them both miserable. I will leave their destiny in your hands. You have the physical power. The learned counsel on the other side is against me, of course, and I almost believe His Honor the Judge is against me; but I don't care, as long as I have a fair intelligent and independent. I only ask you, then, to rely on your own judgment; to justify a good conscience, and not allow to escape your consideration the inviolableness and sanctity of the marriage contract.

One of the favorite dogmas of the Know-Nothings was introduced to the attention of the Senate yesterday by Mr. ADAMS, in the form of a bill to establish a uniform rule of naturalization throughout the United States. The bill extends the term of naturalization to twenty-one years, and acts prospectively upon those foreigners only who may enter the United States after the passage of the act. Mr. ADAMS, in introducing the bill, disclaimed all hostility to foreigners, but he did think immigration was dangerous, inasmuch as foreigners ranged themselves with Abolitionists (!) And, besides, he believed that every inch of the American Continent would be required for the support of the American people. He also preferred American Protestants for office to foreigners and Catholics, notwithstanding which he declared he was not a member of any Know-Nothing organization. The bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The Ocean Mail Appropriation Bill of the last Session, was brought up again, but without receiving much attention it was laid on the table.

In the House, Mr. CLEMENS made an ineffectual effort to introduce a resolution requesting the President to tender the mediation of the United States in such manner as would be most likely to lead to the pacification of the conflict now waging between the Allied Armies and Russia. There was also an effort made to offer a joint resolution authorizing the President to fit out a vessel for the purpose of carrying relief to Dr. KANE's Expedition in the Arctic Sea, but the House refused to receive it.

Neosho, and a Litter of States.

Bless us, how we grow! Of any still night, incline the ear westward and you can almost hear our thrifty country growing. You hear the swaying this way and that as it expands—the bursting of its exterior wrappings. We grow past all the precedents of history. The historic muse will have to ask additional clerks, or her business will fall lamentably astern. The amazed eye-balls of observant nations burst from their sockets with the vision of our marvellous enlargement. The Sandwich Islands—like staples driven into the button-woods by the church door to which we hitch our horses—are almost grown over, and probably will be entirely so before the Spring thaws come again, and then our country will have grown on the line of the latitude of Mexico City up to within twelve degrees of the parallel that forms the northernmost longitude of Asia! But we grow from within as well as outwardly. Our wild land is developed into territories like the islands that grow into continents when the waters after the flood subsided. And our territories are divided into States as naturally as an orange breaks into sections when its peel is removed.

— But to the prospects. On the 15th of this month the special order in the Senate is the consideration of a bill, which was proposed near the close of last Session by Senator JOHNSON of Arkansas. The bill provides for the organization of a new territory south of the Kansas line, and north of the Red River of Louisiana, and six degrees of longitude in width. The tract enclosed covers an area larger than Ohio and New-Jersey. It is the land of the Cherokees, Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws and Seminoles, who number some 60,000 souls—that is, if it be granted, and as there is no black blood in them we presume it is, that Indians have souls. This beautiful region, according to Mr. JOHNSON's bill, is to be organized at once into three territories—the Cherokee which the Cherokees occupy, the Muskogee which the Creeks and Seminoles enjoy, and the Chahta which the Choctaws and Chickasaws possess. These three are to be governed by the Indians as at present, and the expense of government to be an affair of the National Government. One of its sections provides that no white man or Indian, other than present residents, shall be allowed to settle or trespass on any of said lands, without the consent of the Legislature of the proper Territory, and in pursuance of laws enacted by it. Another provision is, that all the free citizens of the five tribes named being of Indian or Indian and white blood, shall, when this act takes effect as to each tribe, respectively become and be citizens of the United States. Another section interferes with the doctrine of squatter sovereignty—it prohibits polygamy. The forty-eighth section enacts that whenever the people of the said three Territories shall consent, they shall be entitled to be erected into a Territory, to be called the Territory of Neosho; and whenever Congress shall be satisfied as to their capacity for self government, and whenever they open their country to emigration and settlement, they may be erected into the State of Neosho.

Now Senator JOHNSON's bill, though it prohibits polygamy, does not in other matters conflict with the new doctrine of squatter sovereignty. Most of the substantial men of these five tribe are slaveholders. One of the sections named above provides that none shall be permitted to enter the territory without the consent of the territorial Legislature—that is to say, your Emigrant Aid societies shall not expend much men or money in abolitionizing Neosho. When your hardy emigrant from New Hampshire drives up to the line with his covered wagon, in which are stored his pots and kettles, spade, shovel, wife and children, he must halt till the legislature of red skins has convened, investigated his political sentiments and voted or not to admit him. It is not to be supposed that your Arkansas planter with his body guard of hands will be kept waiting long, but you, reader, who take the Times and doubt if Slavery after all is so wholesome an institution as the free school, we reckon you might travel in Neosho, but the question of your settlement is a more difficult one. Moreover where men enough of the right stamp have presented themselves to swell to the number sufficient to send a Representative to Congress the sixty thousand who now inhabit it, it shall be entitled to enter as a State. Happy land Neosho will be. No Yankee with his radicalism, no German with his rationalism, no Frenchman with his red republicanism, no Irishman with his fists born doubled, no British snob with his impracticable doctrine of human rights—shall intrude. The legislature shall have it all their own way, and if they feel disposed to maintain their present institution of Slavery none shall enter between 94° and 100° of West longitude and 24° and 37° of latitude,—none shall enter this beautiful tract, which rivals Tennessee in climate, and Kentucky in soil—throughout its whole 43,000,000 of acres—who does not believe in "niggers" as property and to be treated through all time as slaves. Such is the appendix to the area of freedom which it is the purpose of Senator JOHNSON's bill to fix upon us only four days hence. The bill needs amendment. These Indians are polygamists. We protest that under the doctrine of the Nebraska bill we have no right to interfere with their polygamous preferences.

But for the litter of States.—Col. BENTON does not like Senator JOHNSON labor quietly for the extension of Slavery. His hobby is one which history will have less difficulty in reconciling to his fame as a friend of free institutions. He wants a Pacific railroad built, and along the central line which shall start from Col. BENTON's home, St. Louis, and following the track of Col. BENTON's son-in-law FREMONT, shall strike the California line just where Col. BENTON ordained that it should when he first agitated the erection of Nebraska into a territory with a view to this very end. In his lecture at Baltimore the other night—the Colonel was out of Congress, where he says less about it—Col. BENTON proposed to lay off five great States between Missouri and California. The first should occupy the eastern half of Kansas, which his glowing descriptions entitle to the name of the "Bucolic State." The second to take the western half of Kansas, whose delightful climate and well-watered valleys would justify us in designating it the "Benign State." These two, with a territory of a hundred thousand square miles between them, he thinks, will be knocking at our door for admission as States before the New Year's bells shall peal out the arrival of 1857. The third State takes the Three Parks that remind one of Cœle Syria, "the endless labyrinths of grassy valleys," and the Fremont Pass, which makes this eastern part of Utah another Switzerland, and which BEALE and HEAP described as the Hunter's Paradise. The fourth State extends from the Rocky Mountains to the Wahsatch and the Anterria ranges, which—leaving our text—is as dry as a bone. The fifth, including the western third of Utah, with its Great and Little Salt Lakes, and Brigham Young's vagabond nations, moves the refugee up to the California line.

This is natural. Californians meditate seriously the division of California into two States. One in which the Anti-Slavery portion may maintain their freedom from Slavery if they can, the other from which Slavery shall send two trusty Arguses to the Senate.

In Oregon it is quiet now, but shortly since they were urging it, and doubtless will again,—the policy of splitting their territory Eastward West, and if men enough can be coaxed to stay in the several divisions until their first elections are over, of demanding additional representatives in the National Congress. Texas is unwieldy. With so fine an opportunity to reward the public servants with offices, and so feasible a chance to get additional Senators, why should not the policy at once prevail of cracking it into two States? The chance for Cuba is not worth talking of. The gem of the Antilles is clutched by Spain with a dying grasp, and Mr. SOULE is too rash and impetuous, and Mr. PIERCE certainly too amiable and girl-hearted to coax or wrest it from her.

What we have named will do for to day. There was one famous in Scandinavian mythology for his acuteness of hearing, because he could hear the wool growing on the sheep's backs, and the grass on the sides of the mountains. We are unworthy inhabitants of the land that the Scandinavians discovered if we cannot hear the daily starting and growth of such grand territories as these and of new States that run up as rapidly as the bean-stalk of little Jack.

☞ The new plans for a new City Hall were made the subject of a very animated discussion in the Board of Aldermen, at its meeting of last evening. Various members saw no good reasons for altering the plans recommended by the Committee of the Board; others derided novelties, scoffed at the recommendations of the Press, and made themselves otherwise conspicuous; while a majority prevailed, sufficient to recommit the report to the Committee for further consideration. The question will probably recur on an amended report, to be presented during the month.

☞ The Trustees of Columbia College have remonstrated to the Common Council against the proposed extension of Park-place through the College property on Church-street. The ground of remonstrance is that the new buildings of the College are in progress, and that any delay, resulting from the opening of a new street, would be a serious hindrance to the interests of the Institution. The Trustees, however, apparently entertain no objections to the ultimate accomplishment of the project of extension.

Judge Curtis and Naturalization.

It is the unchecked abuse and not the radical defect of certain Federal Laws that, after long endurance, creates a violent reaction in popular sentiment, which in the end may demand their entire reconstruction. If the change should work hardship to the foreign emigrants, they will have their own countrymen and the demagogues at home who cater to their prejudices to thank for it. The Naturalization Law, as it was designed by its original framers, and the same law as now practically administered in four cases out of five, are two very different affairs. The five years' probation was deemed a sufficient safeguard when the change from fourteen years was adopted. It has not proved so in our large cities, nor in the West, where alien votes are to be made, and the favor of alien voters to be propitiated. This provision, it is well known, is often converted into a mockery; the sacred right of American citizenship made a by-word and reproach. The consequences are seen in the very formidable demonstration of the Know-Nothings.

Another result of this reaction is, that wherever the legal issue is made against the loose administration of the law, before the proper Federal tribunals, there is more virtue found in its provisions, rightly interpreted, than the bad men who manufacture alien suffrages pretend to be aware of. Judge CURTIS, of the Supreme Court of the United States, has just disfranchised two thousand alien voters in Massachusetts, whose "papers" were certified by a Police Court, which this eminent jurist decides is not a Court of Record within the meaning of the act of Congress. The Police Judge cannot act as his own Clerk in such case, and his proceedings are therefore void. We do not know that this decision will remedy the evil to any important extent, but it is certainly a check imposed by the highest of the Courts, which may lead to or influence more important results hereafter. It is full time the subject should attract judicial notice. A recent instance of abuse of the law we have heard mentioned as occurring in Indiana, where the County Clerk, a Democrat in politics, and who was a candidate for reelection, in much dread of the Know-Nothings, sent his son, with a deputy's commission, to the line of one of the new Railroads, to make voters of the recently imported Irish laborers and certify to their "papers." The work was carried out, but not so the result which it was thus nefariously designed to secure. The Know-Nothings proved too strong after all.

We might go on to multiply such instances. One of signal notoriety occurred in the Ashland district of Kentucky last year, where the present Representative, if our impression is not erroneous, secured his majority over Mr. LETCHER by alien suffrages on the Railroads, which were not thrown by men who had been five years in the country—nay probably half so long. The abuses of the law at the City Hall in this metropolis are as frequent as the annual State and Municipal elections. It is not to be wondered at, when they react upon the party that encourages the practice.

Help the Poor!

The question comes very seriously up, as Winter draws rapidly upon us—What are the poor to do? Forges stopped, dock-yards shut up, building on every side checked, mercantile business contracted and depressed, thousands pouring in each week from Europe—what is before us?

We hear everywhere of the working men going about seeking employment. Those who are familiar with the poor, inform us that thousands of homes may be found now with the fathers idle or despairing within them. Begging is increasing; and not improbably soon with it will prevail robbery and crime.

To add to the distress, the main support of life, the peculiar and plenteful product of our country—wheat bread—is dearer than it has been for years. Through the accident of a short crop, and more especially through the ill-judged legislation which has so long carried away encouragement and capital from agriculture to other more unnatural sources of production, the greatest agricultural country of the world finds herself shortened for bread. Still whatever may be the causes, or whoever most to blame, here we are at length, on the verge of a severe Winter, with an immense class of poor unemployed. They are people probably who have for the most part just lived on their wages, saving little. Under the usual dispensation of Nature, they have commonly large families. A great portion are honest, hard-working men, who would gladly do anything this severe Winter to stave off cold and hunger from the clamoring little ones around them.

What shall be done? It is bad enough at any time to see a man begging. But to know that in the thousand lodgings of the City there is many and many a worthy mechanic or laborer utterly without work, but ashamed to beg, it is harder yet. The most needy poor are not those we see on the streets. What will we do? As to forming any associations of laborers, for protecting themselves or for discussing political economy, or changing the Tariff,—it seems to us all flam. The Tariff has been up, and the workingmen of New-York had full opportunity to consider and vote upon it.

They did so, probably to their own satisfaction. The question now is, what is to be done for bread? How shall they feed or support themselves now?

We say, firstly, we do not believe the City Government should, even if they would, do anything. These State charities are always badly managed. They have been tried on an immense scale in England and Ireland, and have been found to be utter failures. It corrupts a people, even in starvation, to be fed by a Government. If the City has work which ought to be done, it might be an appropriate time to let it out to contractors, who should employ laborers in the City. But the main aid must come from other sources. There is great wealth in New-York. There are tens of thousands of men who go to Christian churches, and who profess to believe in their unavoidable responsibility towards the poor.

We have no wish to preach a sermon; but we must say, if ever there was an opportunity to show practical Christianity to the world, it is this Winter. You merchant, who comes home each evening to gilded rooms, and nestle into a comfortable chair before your fire of English coals, with a happy family about you—what right have you to all this, if you forget those who have nothing? What is all your church-going and professed piety worth, if your ear is closed to this cry of Hunger which is sounding among us? You talk excusingly behind your wine, or over your fragrant tea, of "hard times." Hard times! If hard to you, who make five thousand where you made your ten, and get eight per cent. instead of fifteen, think what they are to the longshoreman, the iron-workman, the mason, the printer, the day-laborer, who tramp the streets all day, hopelessly, for a job, and go at night to a cheerless and hungry home. If hard, because your daughters must buy fewer laces and silks, and take New-York bonnets instead of Parisian—remember what they are where children used to industrious schools are sent into the streets to pick the fuel which there is not money to buy, and where Poverty means, too often, Prostitution.

If there is humanity and piety in this metropolis, it must arouse itself this Winter to its duty. This crisis will probably be short, but it may be fearful. Great efforts must be put forth, if terrible physical suffering is to be prevented this season. The gaudiness of wealth, the flaunting extravagance, the innumerable luxuries which support no working class among us, but go to fill the pockets of those who now can care for themselves, must for a time be put aside. They would almost be insulting in the face of such haggard Want. But especially should their usual expense be devoted now to the poverty among us. If there is any genuine humanity or religion among us, something of this will be done.

People will drink less wine, will eat fewer costly luxuries, will dress cheaper, will give more economical entertainments, that those who have no work to do and no bread in their houses, may get something in this time of their need. Let every man of common human feelings think what he can best give up, and then, how and where he can best bestow its equivalent. Work, first of all, should be given, if it can be supplied. Search out in your own neighborhood some poverty-stricken man or woman, left helpless by this tide of evils, and give him even the smallest job about your house or your store, which can in any degree earn your charity. Money, bestow as little as possible. It will corrupt both you and the recipient. Or if, as is most frequently the case, you have no time to search out the poor, examine the Associations which seem most likely to conduct your charities judiciously.

Among these we cannot think of one more suitable for the present emergency than the "Association for the Relief of the Poor," which has its head quarters in the Bible House. Just go thither, subscribe your $5 and take away the value in orders upon grocers and coal-dealers, with which you can supply the most pressing poor; or leave the whole in the hands of the excellent visitors of the Association in your own ward. Beside this, we would speak of the "Children's Aid Society" in the Clinton Hall, and the Industrial Schools in various parts of the City, through which the children can be fed and clothed and schooled, or sent away to the country. Contributions here would go directly to the children of the unemployed working men and the lowest poor. Many other societies could be mentioned through which the rich could now relieve the approaching misery of the City. Let each man look about either for a means of bestowing his charity, or for some worthy object. New-York should arise to help its own tremendous Poverty.

Ward's Island.

The Board of Ten Governors has intimated to the Board of Aldermen that the City is under no necessity of effecting further purchases on Ward's Island. The questions growing out of the proposition to buy fifty acres of land on that island from private owners, have been discussed in detail—and warmly discussed. The Committee of the Board of Councilmen, at whose hands the subject has once received a favorable consideration, will perhaps see reasons to alter their judgment. In their first report they recommended a purchase of the McCOTTER interest, at the rate of $1,978 per acre, or upwards of $98,000 for the whole tract. Of the number of acres thus recommended for purchase, scarcely more than one-third is dry land. The residue is simply a water-grant, which the City does not now need, and which it is folly for the Common Council to think of purchasing. We have already commented freely on the enormous price set upon this property—greater, undoubtedly, than the actual value of the land in any private purchaser.

On Ward's Island, the Corporation already possesses a tract that is ample for any purposes to which it may be needful to apply it. It has been urged that a larger extent of territory is essential for burial purposes,—but this idea is repelled by the declaration of the Governors—a body of men who will not be accused of ignorance of the affairs of their own Department, and who may be safely trusted in a question of this kind. It is likewise asserted that the City requires a considerable area, greater than it now possesses, to be laid out in a fanciful manner, for the City Cemetery of the Poor,—that this place, in beauty of adornment and convenience of access, should be a second Greenwood,—that the streets already laid out on this island are private property (still unsold)—that both the Corporation and the Commissioners of Emigration are to be considered simply in the light of trespassers thereon—and that a practical embargo might be legally laid upon future transactions in that locality, until such time as these streets are purchased and duly paid for. In consideration, however, of the inconvenience which would probably result from such extreme action, the owner or owners have stayed their hands thus far.

The arguments produced in favor of this measure are not difficult of refutation. If a restriction may be laid upon the use of the street, it is a very proper act to test the question at once. If lots, which are now held as private property, are rendered unsalable by their proximity to the Pauper establishments, this is also a point susceptible of legal interpretation. If the price demanded of the City Government for a given number of feet of ground, is deemed extravagant, that is a subject for the decision of the Common Council. It cannot be long urged in defence of this project, that the land is essential to the Pauper establishment. The heads of the Almshouse decline to endorse the purchase, and we can scarcely afford to go behind their declaration,—particularly in these hard times.

Theatrical.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—A new petite Comedy, called "A Gentleman from Ireland," was produced here last night, and met with decided success. It is in two acts, and is written by Mr. FITZ JAMES O'BRIEN.

The story is simple, and develops itself rapidly. Mr. Clover, (DYOTT,) an English gentleman of fortune, is expecting (when the curtain rises) the arrival of the son of an early and warm friend with whom he (Mr. Clover) has exchanged promises that one of his daughters shall wed, to cement in this manner an old and genial friendship. He has a letter from this old friend, and from it learns that the young gentleman, his son, is rather eccentric, and why for his own purposes assume some strange antics while on his matrimonial visit. He has scarcely finished the communication, when Mr. Gerald Fitz-Maurice (BROUGHAM) makes his appearance. He is at once received as the future bridegroom. Instead of being so, he is in reality the bearer of the sad intelligence, that this unfortunate young man has contracted a typhoid fever and died on the journey. Gerald relates the circumstance with earnestness, but is not believed. The Clover family conceive it to be a mere ruse, and insist in extending to him all the hospitalities that were intended for his friend. Mr. Fitz-Maurice is desired to stay, and is overloaded with attentions. He pledges his honor as a gentleman that they are laboring under a delusion, but they only laugh at him. He relates minutely his own history—they admire his audacity and invention. There is no struggling against such determination to take him for somebody else, and he surrenders, although stoutly protesting that he is Gerald Fitz-Maurice, and not a defunct friend. In the suit act we have the hero comfortably ensconced in the house of Mr. Clover, and uncomfortably in love with one of that gentleman's daughters. Under the peculiar circumstances of his situation, the suit progresses rapidly, and the curious parent manifests a disposition to settle £20,000 on his happy child. Although delighted with the prospect of obtaining the girl he loves, Gerald is tormented by the fact that it is all a mistake. As there is no fighting against such difficulties, he determines on making an honorable retreat, and is on the point of doing so, when Mr. Clover enters with a letter which he has received from his old friend, corroborating all the circumstances of the son's death. There is a slight resistance ina, but Gerald's position throughout has been so truthful and gentlemanly, that he cannot be reproached. The piece ends happily by his obtaining the hand of the lady he loves.

There is much dramatic ability displayed in the elaboration of this plot, and the situations are thoroughly humorous and effective. The tag to the second act is perhaps a trifle too long, but it does not hang fire. In other respects—literary and dramatic—there is nothing to be improved.

The character of Gerald Fitz-Maurice is a decided addition to Mr. BROUGHAM's repertoire. There have been but few delineators of the Irish Gentleman on the stage. Mr. BROUGHAM achieved an unequivocal success in this difficult rôle. He was easy and subdued throughout, contributing in no small degree to the benefit of the piece.

The action devolves mostly on Maurice. The other characters are slight and sketchy, but sufficiently individualized; they were ably sustained by Mesdames HOEY, CONOVER, Messrs. DYOTT, STEWART, BLAND, PETERS and BURKE. There was a great deal of applause on the fall of the curtain. Mr. O'BRIAN was loudly called for, and made a plunge at the orchestra from a private box; immediately afterwards retiring into private life. This was not considered sufficient by the audience, who insisted upon having two more bows from the author—and got them.

"A Gentleman from Ireland" will appear every evening this week.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—A good humored but sharp piece of local satire was produced here last evening, called "Apollo in New-York," from the pen of Mr. DION BOUCICAULT. The leading idea of the piece, for it has no plot, is a little behind the times, but the dialogue is on courant. Apollo, or Apollening, a grand Italian Tenor, is of course Signor MAMIO, and of his reception here, and of Miss COUTT's strange infatuation, the burlesque treats funnily. In the matter of experience Apollo makes some strong and decided hits, and indulges a keen observation with appropriate expression on all current topics. He inclines strongly to the Know-Nothing principle in politics, and opposes foreign intervention with a good deal of force. Some of the sarcasm is occasionally indiscreet because suggested by inexperience; generally, however, it is innocent.

In a literary point of view "Apollo in New-York" owes its success to localization rather than brilliancy. There are but few good jokes, and the rhymes, in many instances, are strained and clumsy for burlesque writing—which, of all other writing, requires ease and fluency. The localization, however, is clever, and considering the short time Mr. BOUCICAULT has been in the country, displays much observation.

The piece has been placed on the stage with some little care, and is rendered effectively by Mr. BURTON's company. A tableaux at the end was much applauded. The burlesque was masterfully successful, and is repeated to-night.

☞ School teachers are said to be in demand at Decatur, Illinois. Teaching is by the scholar, $2 50 and $3 per scholar per quarter, or $20 to $40 per month. The usual difficulty will be in scholars. They are generally poor—some good.

New Books.

The season is prolific of books. Hard Times, the War, the reduction of wages all around have an effect rather to increase than diminish their number.

Mr. A. B. JOHNSON, of Utica, a man known to the world as a banker! is now in the author of a Treatise on Banking, occasionally spoken of as the author of Religion in its Relation to Present Life, and a good deal read in certain pleasantly told tales published some years ago in the Knickerbocker Magazine, must be talked of hereafter as at home in another department of literature, in which bankers or the writers of tales are much accustomed to shine. He has written, and D. APPLETON & Co., of Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, have published, a book of 256 12mo. pages, on The Meaning of Words, analyzed into words and unwieldy things, classified into intellections, imaginings and emotions. Something of the metaphysical and learned character of the book may be gathered from the motto on its title-page: "Four incredulous fallacies are concealed in the structure of language; it identifies what unworthily are diverse, estimates what unworthily are heterogeneous, makes a unit of what unworthily are multitudinous, and transmutes into each other what unworthily are incommensurable." The book, as the author suggests it—for very slow reading—the slower the better—Mr. JOHNSON published his first views on this general subject in 1828, under the title of The Philosophy of Human Knowledge; Or, A Treatise on Human Language. In 1836 he revised the work, and it was published by HARPER & BROTHERS, under the title of A Treatise on Language; Or, the Relations which Words bear to Things. These pages convey the author's conceptions on the subject—the mature results of at least fifty years of reflection. We presume that he intended to work all that was valuable of those early publications into this the labor of his mature years, and that what of them is now here embodied he rejects. The volume will not very much amuse light reading, nor afford much gratification to those who most delight in romance. But it is intelligible and suggestive, and scholars in Philology will delight to search it for new views of truth in that department, and to detect the errors which one theorist never fails to discover in the speculations of another.

Among religious books, a noticeable one and which will be welcome to a large class, is a second and enlarged edition of Rev. Dr. TYNG's admirable "Memoir of Rev. Dr. GEORGE T. DOBELL." The first edition was very early disposed of. This is now issued a moment before an imperative demand for it was made. It is published by the "Protestant Episcopal Society for the promotion of Evangelical Knowledge," at No. 11 Bible House, Astor-place.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

☞ Save the Children.—The tender age of a few drops of DR. MOFFAT'S COLD AND COUGH MIXTURE will cure the worst cold at first appearance. It also checks the most severe cough, tightness, hoarseness, and inflammation of the throat or lungs in a surprisingly short time. No family should fail to have it at this season. Price 25 cents. Sold by RUSHTON, CLARK & CO., BELLUE & CO., and all Druggists. A. CUSHMAN & CO., Proprietors, No. 182 Fulton-st.

☞ Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Plants.—Including everything necessary to the Garden, Greenhouse, Nursery and Orchard, with all the recent introductions; at very low rates. ☞ Nervous Diseases Controlled and Conquered.—Three-fourths of the physical pain endured by the human race proceeds from affections of the nerves. The unutterable agony of neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, eczema, headache, and a thousand nameless pangs that dart through every portion of the system, and distract the brain, are referable directly to an unnatural condition of the nervous system. The weaker sex are a prey to a variety of agonies that may truly be called infinite, all growing out of the disordered action of the nerves. The nerves are the seat of all pain. Kill the nerve of a decaying tooth, and the pain ceases. Destroy the nerves of a limb, and it is paralyzed. Render all the nerves of the frame inoperative, and you produce death. Of what immense importance, therefore, must a preparation be that will instill health, vigor, hardiness and permanent energy into this complex arrangement of vital agents known as the nervous system. Experience has proved, the faculty admit, the second century, that DR. MORSE'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL will produce these almost miraculous effects. If a I could witness the changes it brings about in the condition of those who are "ready to perish," how it banishes melancholy, begets strength, controls pain, builds up and fortifies the constitution, and prolongs life.

The Cordial is put up, highly concentrated, in pint bottles. Price $2 per bottle, two for $3 six for $12.

HOTELS.

THE SMITHSONIAN HOUSE, Broadway, corner of Bond-st., on the same block with the Metropolitan Hotel and Niblo's Garden, and nearly opposite St. Thomas' Church

This beautiful new Hotel, in the heart of Broadway, will supply a great desideratum to travelers and the public in general—first class accommodations in the best quarter of the City, at very low rates

The subscriber now announces to the public, that he has concluded a negotiation with his landlord, CHARLES H. SMITH, Esq., counsellor at law of the law firm of Charles H. Smith & Bullows, No 44 Wall-st., New-York, whose name I am permitted to refer to in this connection as a guarantee that what I offer may be relied upon, by which the new white marble building adjoining on Broadway and the corner, 100 feet on Bond-st. will soon be added to the "SMITHSONIAN," and will present together an architectural pile as stately as any on Broadway, enlarging the establishment to the times its present capacity, and affording accommodations for 400 guests. There will also be provided suites of rooms for families. The house will be thoroughly heated by steam pipes of the most approved construction, securing thus a most pleasant atmosphere, and obviating every danger of fire, the fire apparatus being located off the premises and "out of reach." The Dining Saloon will be 45 by 100 feet on the first floor on Broadway, with private dining rooms adjoining, and meals furnished as ordered at prices graded to suit the convenience of those inclined to economy as well as the tastes of those more extravagant. ☞ AND, WITH ALL THIS LET ME ASSURE THE PUBLIC THAT THE ESTABLISHMENT SHALL NOT BE SURPASSED FOR THE RESPectability, DECORUM, ORDER, NEATNESS, ATTENTION AND COMFORT, WITH WHICH IT SHALL BE CONDUCTED. The necessary works to adapt the new buildings to the purposes designed are in a state of rapid forwardness, and will be completed by 1st February, of which due notice will be given; AND IN THE MEANTIME THE ACCOMMODATIONS OF THE PRESENT SMITHSONIAN WILL NOT BE INTERFERED WITH, AND MY FRIENDS AND PATRONS ARE INVITED TO CONTINUE THEIR FAVORS AS HERETOFORE. BY JACOB ABBOTT.

Embellished with numerous and beautiful Engravings.

TERMS.—Each number of HARPER'S STORY BOOKS will contain 100 pages in small quarto form, very beautifully illustrated, and printed on superfine calendered paper.

The Series may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, and Postmasters, or from the Publishers, at Three Dollars a year, or Twenty-five Cents a number. Subscriptions may commence with any number

Messrs. HARPER & BROTHERS have the pleasure of announcing that they have at length commenced the publication of this series of Juvenile Books, and that their issue will be continued at regular intervals.

It is the design of the Publishers to render it in every way the most attractive and valuable So ies of Books for the Young ever offered to the public. They are confident that they have facilities for giving to the work that wide circulation which will warrant them in expending upon it all the resources of typographical and illustrative art. The illustrations will be numerous and in all respects equal to those furnished in "Harper's Magazine." The successive numbers of the STORY BOOKS will take a wide range in respect both to subject and manner of treatment.

The first Number, which is now ready, entitled

BRUNO;

OR, LESSONS OF FIDELITY, PATIENCE AND SELF-DENIAL, TAUGHT BY A DOG,

Is illustrated by more than Forty Engravings. The Publishers present it as a fair specimen of the numbers which will follow. They will present a great variety of important and interesting facts, and will exhibit many moral and religious principles for mothers to instil into the minds of their children by reading the books to them or by placing them in their hands.

The work, though not intended to be of exclusive religious character, will be so far designed to exert a moral and religious influence on the minds of the readers, as to adapt them to the use of Sabbath School Libraries.

II.

PARISH AND OTHER PENCILINGS.

By KIRWAN, author of "Letters to Bishop Hughes," "Remarks at Home," "Men and Things as Seen in Europe." 12mo., muslin, 75 cents.

The effective pen of the famous Anti-Catholic polemic is every where to be recognized in this racy volume. A large portion of the work is devoted to familiar narratives, illustrating the leading truths of religion, by examples drawn from real life. Among the more interesting papers in the collection are sketches of Rev. Arthur Cleary, Dr. Alexander and Dr. Millan, which comprise a variety of personal recollections of those eminent men, and exhibit a discussion of feeling and sincerity of characters, which make them valuable specimens of biographical composition. The writings of Kirwan have already gained an extensive popularity, and must always command the attention of the public for their vehement expression of opinion, their glowing religious spirit and their robust natural eloquence.

The day Calendar will be called at the City Hall.

TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Judge Bosworth.

The case of Gibbons vs. The Broadway Bank is still on. A number of witnesses were examined this morning to show Mr. Gibbons' activity and influence in organizing the Bank. The plaintiff rested his case, and Mr. Whiting moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the action is brought, not for services rendered the Bank, but for damages sustained in not having been appointed its Cashier.

That no compensation could be claimed which was founded on expectation, and if there had been a promise it had been before the organization of the Bank, and consequently it is not liable for any damage which may thus have arisen to the plaintiff. The Court refused to dismiss the complaint, and thought that the question of damages was one for the Jury.

His Honor also intimated that the question raised by Mr. Whiting, as to the liability of the Bank, might be decided at the General Term.

The defence was then opened by Mr. Whiting.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge McCarthy.

A FEMALE STOCK-JOBBER.

Eliza Hopkins vs. Simeon Draper.—This is an action brought in the name of a widow lady who formerly kept a boarding-house in Madison and Market-streets, to recover a deposit of $500, alleged to have been made on a time bargain with the defendant, for the purchase of 200 shares of the stock of the Harlem Railroad. It was averred by the counsel for the plaintiff that at the time of the contract Mr. Draper held no such stock in his possession, and that he was therefore liable to recover the $500, as the contract was in contravention of a statute known as the Stock-Jobbing Act. On the part of the defence it was denied that any such person as the plaintiff ever had any transactions with the defendant, for the purchase of stock, or that she had ever been seen by Mr. Draper or his clerks; in fact, that she was a mere myth in the stock market, and that the sum could not be maintained in her name. It appeared from the evidence of a Mr. Lewis that the contract was made on the 31st of May last, and that previous to the maturity of the bargain to deliver the stock, it fell down in the market, and the counsel of the plaintiff had conferred with Lewis, who swore that he made the bargain to purchase the stock for the plaintiff, and deposited $500 which he had received from her, and paid the money at the office of Mr. Draper, not for himself, but for Mrs Hopkins. That before the expiration of the 60 days he called at the office of the defendant and inquired if the shares of stock had actually been set aside. Mr. Draper said No, it was not customary to do so where stock was bought on time until the same was paid for. That this was merely a promise to purchase the stock and not binding. Lewis further testified that he proposed the defendant to return the deposit, which he declined to do, and he had paid the difference and would have to pay the market price. The witness produced to the Court the following memoranda which were admitted in evidence: 200 SHARES. NEW-YORK, May 31, 1854.

I have sold to E. Hopkins two hundred shares of the Stock of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company, at fifty cent per cent, payable and deliverable in sixty days at the option of the purchaser, with interest at the rate of 6 per cent.

Received on deposit of 50 per cent, five hundred dollars.

SIMEON DRAPER.

Due July 30, 1854. EUGENE LEDENTU, Attorney.

200 SHARES. NEW-YORK, May 31, 1854.

I have purchased of Simeon Draper two hundred shares of the Stock of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company, at fifty cent per cent, payable and deliverable in sixty days at the option of the purchaser, with interest at the rate of six per cent.

Received on deposit of 50 per cent, five hundred dollars.

SIMEON DRAPER.

Due July 30, 1854. EUGENE LEDENTU, Attorney.

NEW-YORK, Feb 6 1854.

MR. J. D. LEWIS—Dear Sir: The five hundred dollars I gave to you for safe keeping. I wish that you would invest it in something that will be paying. The investment I will leave entirely to your judgment, which I have entire confidence in. Should you wish to use my name in any transactions of business for yourself, you are at liberty to do so. Hoping that any investment that you make will prove profitable, I remain, very respectfully, yours, ELIZA HOPKINS.

On the part of the defence Mr. Busted moved for a non-suit, on the ground that there was no proof that any contract had been made with Mrs. Hopkins, or that she had ever been to the office of the defendant.

Mr. H. Mott opposed the motion, which was denied by the Court.

Mr. Busted then called several witnesses to prove that the witness Lewis was a dry goods clerk, and that he made a number of contracts in the name of E. Hopkins, but until the commencement of this suit it was always supposed that Lewis was E. H. Hopkins, and that the bargains he was making were on his own account. It was clearly proved that there was such a person as mrs. Hopkins, and although she was not produced in Court several persons testified that they were acquainted with her. In summing up Mr. Busted urged to the Jury that if the stock of the Harlem Railroad Company had risen instead of falling, this suit would never have been brought. On the other hand Mr. Mott contended that the whole transaction was illegal, and said that the Jury must find a verdict for the plaintiff.

His Honor, in his charge to the Jury, said that if they were of opinion, under the evidence, that Lewis made this bargain on the part of Mrs. Hopkins in good faith, she would be entitled to recover, provided the defendant had the stock in his possession at the time of the contract; or if he was authorized by any other person who held the stock in their names to make such a contract. If he had not such stock, then the transaction was illegal and void under the Statutes. The Jury retired for a short time and found for the plaintiff, and for $500.

Mr. Busted gave notice of his intention to appeal against the charge of the Court and the verdict of the Jury.

U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

Illegally taking a Letter.—John Borlan, the book-keeper of the Liverpool House, was arrested and held to bail, charged with opening a letter and extracting $10 therefrom.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—Dec. 11.

Before Hon. Recorder Tiffany.

Only one case was tried yesterday. Other cases would have been tried if the witnesses or the prosecutors had been ready. But they were not. The case brought before the Court was one of BURGLARY IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

Henry Edwards was charged with burglariously entering the house No. 410 First-avenue, on the night of the 16th November. William F. Vail, by trade a butcher, deposed that he lived on said premises. On the night in question, he heard "a tracking across the floor." "What is that?" said his wife. "That is the cat," said he. But feeling dissatisfied with the admission, he opened the door, and by the light of a candle saw a shadow flitting away. "Who's there?" said he, but there was no answer. The shadow ran out of the house and fled up the street. The witness followed after. He caught nobody, but saw somebody hide himself behind a brick pile. There were no goods disturbed in the house of plaintiff.

Police Officer James Fuller, of the Eighteenth District, arrested a man who was running. He had no shoes on his feet. He had one in hand, and he had left one behind him on the track he had reversed.

The Assistant District Attorney wished to know from the prosecutor what there was portable on his premises.

Mr. Spencer, for the defence, said that for the sake of argument he would admit that there was a cook-stove in the kitchen.

Mr. Vail, who were a very ancient coat, said he would not take $200 for the clothing he had preserved at home. He had also jewelry to the value of $150, which the burglar might have taken, but didn't.

Mr. Spencer's defence rested on the testimony. It was not proved that any burglary was committed. The prosecutor had failed to prove that any door or window was forced. No property was disturbed, and moreover the prisoner had not been identified. The prosecutor saw the shadow of a person flying away; but a flying shadow is nothing. A man such a [illegible] could not [illegible] on evidence.

Verdict—Not guilty.

New-York Daily Times

CANADA.

Illustrations of Public Morality—A Washington Item—The New Tariff—The Governor's Farewell Ball.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

QUEBEC, Monday, Dec. 4, 1854.

IN ANNOUNCING, on a recent occasion, the financial policy of the new Administration, Inspector General CAYLEY said he had profited by experience, and instead of pursuing the same policy as when formerly at the head of the finances of the country, of practicing a strict economy, keeping the public purse empty, and thereby alienating hungry and disappointed followers, he meant to carry out the system which had been so successful in the hands of his successor, Hon. Mr. HINCKS. He intended to keep the public chest so well replenished as to enable the Government to meet the demands of their supporters in a liberal and generous manner. Perhaps there are other public financiers who act on the same principle as Mr. CAYLEY and Mr. HINCKS, of strengthening their political position by a lavish distribution of the public money; but there are few who would have the hardihood publicly to avow it, and if we cannot extend to Mr. CAYLEY our need of praise for the strict morality of his principles, we can at least appreciate his straightforwardness in disdaining to throw any covering-cloak over his political depravity. Perhaps it would be interpreting the Inspector General's nonsensicalness too literally, to suppose that he meant to give permission to Government hacks in the House to draw on the public exchequer ad libitum, although, in some hard cases, even that may be included. When we find £3,000 of our money disbursed at Washington, and entered in the estimates as "Compensation to ———, Esq., in full of all disbursements, expenses, &c., in disseminating information (!) respecting Reciprocity of Trade with the United States," the delicate way in which this expenditure of $12,000 is accounted for brings forcibly to mind the recent revelations in the Colt Patent case, and we infer that what our Government can do at Washington to carry a point, they will not scruple, on some occasions, to do at Quebec. However, as a general rule, our M. P.'s are not bribed in this direct and gross manner. The Government buy up their support, without killing their conciences outright, by giving one of their followers a grant of $20,000 or $100,000 for a road in his county, which will give him the gratitude of his constituents as a security for his return to the House at the next election—another of their followers they reward by establishing a dozen new Post-Offices in his county, and appointing his friends as Postmasters, at handsome salaries—another by issuing a Commission, and making all his leading local supporters Justices of the Peace; while the counties of such themes in their side as BROWN and MACKENZIE, are left to languish in utter deprivation of all Government favors.

The first fruits of Inspector-General CAYLEY'S liberal financial policy are at present before the House, in his paltry scheme for the reduction of the tariff. With a balance in the hands of the Government at the end of 1853, of three and a half millions of dollars, now augmented to upwards of four millions, and which, at the end of next year, making allowance for all necessary expenditure, cannot be less than five or six millions—the Inspector General proposes a modification of the tariff, which he calculates will reduce the revenue by £100,000, although the probability is, that with an augmented population, and an increased consumption caused by a diminution in price, the reduction will not amount to a single sixpence. The whole revenue for the present year is estimated at a mere fraction below six millions of dollars, the Customs alone yielding upwards of four and a half millions, an increase of 25 per cent. on the Customs Revenue of 1853, which again exceeded that of 1852, in even a higher ratio. With such a rapidly accumulating revenue, already far in excess of any demands that can, with the slightest regard to economy, be made upon it, the Inspector General has met the cry of the country to be delivered from useless taxation, with his paltry reduction of £100,000—a sufficient proof that the policy of corruption, which he announced some time before, he really meant to carry out in good faith.

The new tariff, which is on the eve of receiving the final sanction of Parliament, for the former mixed ad valorem and specific duties substitutes a reduced specific duty on sugar, molasses, tea, coffee, tobacco, cigars, snuff, wines, whisky, rum, brandy, gin and cordials, and on spices, fruits, &c. It repeals also the 20 per cent. and 2½ per cent ad valorem duties on the articles embraced in the Reciprocity Treaty—in the event, however, of the suspension of that Treaty, those duties to return to their present amount. The Government scheme was strongly opposed not only by the political opponents of the Administration, but by every representative of the commercial interest in the House. Still, like other Government measures, it had a considerable majority of votes in its favor. Hon. Mr. YOUNG, one of the members for Montreal, deprecated the adoption of the specific system of duties, as injurious to the mercantile community, and as taxing the poor man in a higher ratio than the rich, and cited the example of the United States, and the authority of Hon. Mr. WALKER, late Secretary of the Treasury, in support of the superiority of the ad valorem principle. To carry out his views, he submitted a scheme of ad valorem duties on the articles above enumerated, of 20 per cent. on sugar, 10 per cent. on tea, &c., which would have made the reduction amount to about the same as that by the Government scheme, but founded on a more just principle. His amendment, however, was rejected, and the principle of specific duties affirmed. He then moved the sweeping reduction of all the 12½ per cent duties on manufactures to 10 per cent, which would have brought the revenue down by another £120,000, and so more nearly equalized it with the public expenditure; but in this also he was outvoted by a majority of honorable members who could appreciate the Inspector General's reasons for keeping an overflowing public chest.

Parliament, it is expected, will adjourn this week, after the Upper House has passed the Seigneurial Tenure and Clergy Reserve bills, which they have been discussing for the last ten days, as received from the Legislative Assembly. The Lower House, meanwhile, has to pass the estimates for 1854, i. e. succeeding to our perplexed finance system to vote supplies which have already been expended, and to carry the measure for the reduction of the tariff through its final stage. It is doubtful whether or not the measure for rendering the Legislative Council, or Upper House, elective will be proceeded with or not before the adjournment, which will probably be till the middle of February.

On Friday night Lord ELGIN gave his farewell ball at Spencerwood, which was attended by a large proportion of the members of the Legislature. His Excellency made a farewell speech—rather a pretty affair in its way—expressive of his regret at leaving the shores of Canada. That he really felt as he expressed himself is doubtful. The odor of rotten eggs cast at him by the Conservatives still adheres to him, and the popularity he then enjoyed with the Liberal party has long since vanished. Every spectator of his career believes that, but for the thirty thousand dollars of salary, not to be designed by a poor Scotch lord, he would have left our shores long ago. Sir HENRY HAX is about to assume the difficult task of governing a self-governed colony; owing obedience on the one hand to the English Cabinet, and rendering himself odious here, on the other hand, if he carries out their instructions. If he succeeds better than his predecessors, he will deserve no small amount of praise.

GOVERNOR OF MONROE.—The St. Paul's Times of the 2d reports a rumor that the dock hands of the War Eagle, on her last trip down, had a frozen man taken off, who was heard nailing up a box. When the boat reached a point below, Prairie du Chien, the box was taken ashore and buried. The box was dug up by the inhabitants, in which was found the corpse of a young man with his skull smashed in. An inquest was held on the body. The box was identified as coming from the War Eagle, and officers were sent to arrest the progress of the boat.

Extension of the New-York State Capitol—Improvement and Improvement of the Assembly Chamber.

From the Albany Journal.

The work of enlarging the Capitol, which was commenced soon after the adjournment of the last session of the Legislature, was steadily prosecuted during the Summer and Fall months, and is now ready for use. During its progress, much care was taken not only to render the work substantial, but to so reconstruct and arrange the building itself as to make it creditable to the State.

The stone and mason work, one of the most important features in the extension, was done under the personal supervision of Mr DANIEL TURNER, in a manner highly creditable to him as a mechanic. Although this work was completed some months since, there is yet no blemish to be seen, or any indication of its separation from the main building. Mr. WM. JONES, the carpenter, has performed his obligation to the State in a manner highly satisfactory to the commissioner and the architect. It only proves him to be what he has long had the reputation of being, a good mechanic, thoroughly understanding his business. The plastering and stucco work was done by Messrs. BOYD & McDONALD, and the painting by Messrs. JOSEPH DAVIS & Co. This work will doubtless be inspected by thousands who will visit the Chamber after it shall be thrown open to the public; and we will only add that the work done by both firms has been highly spoken of by every member of the committee.

We pass over particularizing, as that our readers may see the advantages and benefits of this improvement—particularly in regard to the health and comfort of those whose presence will be required there during many tedious hours for three months of the ensuing year.

By the extension, an area of ninety-six square feet has been added by extending the chamber, all of which has been given to the members. This allows each member considerable more room than formerly, and will render their sessions less wearisome than when the desks were necessarily very compact. Instead of huddling together in inconvenient corners, Committees are provided with spacious and convenient rooms, where they can meet for consultation without interruption. In addition to the cloak-room, on the floor of the chamber, there is one for the Committee of Ways and Means; and there are seven other Committee rooms on the second floor, formerly occupied by the Library.

But the Building Committee have not confined themselves to the work of convenience. They have had, also, an eye to the health and comfort of members. Ventilation, the most important feature in all public buildings, has been studiously considered and successfully attained. There are seven ventilators in the chamber. The principal one is in the centre of the ceiling. It is nine feet and a half in diameter, tapering off to three feet and a half above the roof. This tube is covered by one of ESPEY'S ventilators, which prevents the rush of cold air downwards. The other six are in the walls above the windows, and are so constructed as to be opened or closed at will. In place of the steam apparatus used last year for heating the chamber, two new hot air furnaces, of CHILSON'S patent, have been placed in the basement. These, with the two others formerly in use, will be sufficient to heat all the rooms connected with the Assembly Chamber.

New desks, of enlarged size, made of mahogany, with a draw and other conveniences, and covered with india rubber cloth, occupy the places of the old, dilapidated cherry desks. Spacious armchairs, made of mahogany, and covered with hair-cloth, take the places of the old cane bottoms; and an abundance of room is afforded for the ingress and egress of members.

The rickety old wooden railing, with its iron supports, or rather stumbling blocks, which separated the members from the lobby, has been removed, and a neat iron one, beautifully painted and bronzed, erected in its place. The Speaker's Desk, as also the Clerk's, are the same as last year, they being thought by the Committee as neat and as comfortable as could be procured. The Chamber will be lighted as before, with the exception that two additional burners have been placed on the side walls.

On entering the Chamber its simplicity and neatness will at once attract the attention of the visitor, and the spontaneous verdict will be that there is no more beautiful Legislative Hall in the Union.

Entering the main door, your attention is attracted by the Speaker's chair, behind which hangs the fine old picture of Gen. WASHINGTON, full length, in a speaking attitude. Over the chair is a green canopy surmounted with a gilt eagle with a circular frame hanging on its bill, enclosing the coat-of-arms of the State, beautifully painted. From the broad gilt ornament which encircles the canopy, green drapery is suspended, neatly trimmed with braids and tassels. Across the tops of the high windows there is a plain, but rich gilt ornament, from which the green drapery is suspended, falling in graceful folds to the sides of the window, where it is fastened by means of cords and tassels.

The side windows are draped with the same colored damasks, but not in the same manner. They are, however, ornamented and hang to correspond with the large windows. The walls are painted to correspond with the drapery. They are of a very light delicate color, which gives the Chamber a lively appearance. The ceiling is of Roman architecture, rich and simple, which adds to its beauty. The centre is an elaborate piece of work, and reflects great credit, both on the designer and the artist who executed the work. The ceiling is flat, and from the centre piece to within a few feet of the wall, it is perfectly plain. The ornamental work on the side walls, and which covers a few feet of the ceiling, is extremely neat, and corresponds with the general architectural work in the chamber. Its whole appearance is neat, and the simplicity of the design, together with the taste displayed in fitting it up, will, we think, meet with general approval.

What was formerly used as the Lobby, is to be hereafter appropriated to lady visitors. This will avert a great annoyance heretofore experienced, in climbing up two pair of stairs, after they had climbed Capital Hill, and the tedious flight of stairs in front of the Capital.

The Committee entrusted with this work consists of Comptroller COOK, Secretary LEAVENWORTH, Rev. JOHN N. CAMPBELL, Hon. G. Y. LANSING and ROBERT H. PRUYN, Esq. Mr. WILLIAM ELLIS is the Architect.

The fitting up and furnishing of the Chamber was placed under the entire direction of Rev. Dr. CAMPBELL. He devoted much time to it, and displayed his usual taste in the selection of the furniture and the drapery which adorn it.

Strange as it may appear, the Committee have not expended the entire appropriation made by the Legislature, while those who contracted for doing the work appear satisfied with what they received at the hands of the State.

Letter from Forney about the Alleged Nebraska Land Speculation.

To the Editors of the Evening Star:

GENTLEMEN: The following article is copied from the New-York TIMES of Friday, and I ask a brief space in your paper to refute it:

[Here follows an article, entitled, "A Brave Land Speculation—DOUGLAS and FORNEY interested in Nebraska," which appeared in the Cleveland Leader.]

In the first place, I have entered into no copartnership for any such purpose, with any of the parties named, or with any others. I never conversed with Judge DOUGLAS in reference to the subject alluded to, or to any similar object. I never saw Mr. GRAY, of the Cleveland Plaindealer, in my life; know him but by reputation as an able editor. I have never seen or heard from Mr. CHAPMAN for a year. I never saw or met any such person as "WILLIAM GREEN, of Elmyra, Ohio."

A gentleman named Col. BARTON GREEN bore a letter of introduction to me from Acting-Governor CUMMING, and while in this city, as one of the party escorting the remains of Governor BURT, I raised $200 for him, to assist him in defraying the expenses of the removal of those remains to South Carolina, for which he gave a draft upon Governor CUMMING. Not a cent of money have I advanced, or contracted to pay hereafter, in connection with any such copartnership or "scheme." So far as Acting-Governor CUMMING is concerned, I regret that he is not here to defend himself and to sustain this statement. That he will be able to repel all aspersions upon his official and personal character, I firmly believe. He has written to me freely in reference to his responsibilities and to his arduous duties, and not a line that he has written sustains, even by inference, the charges now preferred against him. His last letter says:

"I never desired the office of Governor. I became acting Governor by an act of Providence, and I intend to do the duties of the office honestly and fearlessly, so that during my administration no friend need be ashamed of me."

Pursued by calumny, and hunted by men I never injured in my life, I have refrained from noticing the myriad slanders of my enemies, but this fabrication is too gross to be passed over.

Yours, truly, J. W. FORNEY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6, 1854.

Miscellaneous Intelligence.

The Boston Traveller gives a variety of missionary intelligence gathered from a Monthly concert held in the Berkshire street Church.

DEATH OF MR. CRANE, AT GAWAR.—A letter was read from Mr. RHEA, giving the particulars of Mr. CRANE's death, of the Nestorian Mission. It seems that it was very sudden. Mr. CRANE was seized on Thursday, the 17th of August, after a laborious day devoted to visiting the sick, with violent headache. This was followed by severe fever; but on Saturday he was entirely relieved of pain, and was able to rise and dress himself, and continued to do so until the following Wednesday morn, when he took his bed. His fever after this increased rapidly, and was attended with great prostration and stupor. Up to that time he had declined taking medicine, and was not considered dangerous; but after this his friends became alarmed, and sent immediately for Dr. WRIGHT, who arrived on Saturday. But the sick man was then delirious, and there was no hope for him. He died on Sabbath morning. A few days after Mr. CRANE's death, a son of the deceased Missionary died suddenly, while with his mother, on the way from Gawar to Oroomiah.

CHINA.—Extracts from Mr. BONNEY's journal, at Canton, to Sept. 9, report great confusion, war and strife all around Canton. The city was thoroughly ended by two bands of Insurgents, one on the north, west, and the other on the nor heast corner; and between them and the Imperialists there were frequent battles. The Government were making extraordinary efforts to defend the city. An order had been issued for the demolition of all the houses and shops adjoining the walls of the city on the outside. This will occasion great distress, as hundreds of small shopkeepers occupy these houses and shops. The walls and gates of the city were being repaired, and were carefully watched. At present, the only way in which the city can be taken is thought to be by siege, and this has already commenced. The Insurgents had possession of a large fort at Whampoe, and maintained their authority for several miles around. They had executed some thirty of their own party for being concerned in pillaging a neighboring village. The Sabbath services of the missionaries continued without interruption, and the Imperialist soldiers were often present at these meetings.

Kansas Prospects.

Mr. J. H. HOWE, who has been several months "prospecting" in Kansas, gives his impressions as follows, in a letter to the Conneaut (O.) Reporter, written on board a steamer on the Missouri River, Nov. 19, (while on his way home:)

I think this whole country eminently adapted to slave labor. Wealthy slaveholders, with plenty of "help," can possess themselves of these lands in large tracts, and make money in subduing and cultivating them. This they will do, and despite all efforts yet making, or means yet adopted, by the Free States to prevent it, Kansas will be a Slave State.

The "Emigrant Aid Societies," so called, as I have remarked in some former communication, have done, and are doing practically, very little to accomplish their object.

I hear much said of "Aid Associations," with heavy capital, &c. This capital must be so employed as to "aid" settlers by sustaining them after arriving in the Territory until they have time to erect cabins and make a beginning. Money thus employed will make Kansas a Free State. Otherwise money will make it a Slave State. The South will spend money freely to accomplish its purposes; it will hire men to go into the Territory and stay there until this question is settled. Southern men are quietly looking on, and witnessing the operations of these "Aid" Associations, knowing that four-fifths of the emigrants thus sent into the Territory, and left to starve by those that induced them to go, will hurry out of the country, and in the Spring, just before the elections, they intend to send into the Territory from Missouri, Arkansas, &c., a few thousand men, and sustain them there with money, teams, &c., until the contest is over and the victory won, and Kansas consigned to the dominion of Slavery. I speak from personal knowledge of their designs, and know what I say to be true.

An election for Delegate to Congress will be held on the 29th. I look for a Slavery triumph.

VILLAINOUS OUTRAGE.—One of those crimes which cause the heart of humanity to shudder, occurred in Gilbertsville, Otsego County, on the evening of Sunday last. A young girl, aged about 14, had been attending an evening meeting, and left before the services closed to prepare the house for the reception of the family and some other friends. On leaving the place of meeting, she was followed by some fiend in human shape, who went into the house after her and threatened to cut her throat—showing a knife at the same time—unless she complied with his demand. Through fright she fainted, and while in that condition he committed a brutal outrage upon her person. On the approach of the family the villain fled, and has, thus far, escaped. The girl says, although he was a stranger, that she thinks she could recognize the person.

MURDER IN A BALL ROOM.—The Macon (Ga.) Beacon, of Nov. 15, learns from a gentleman of Columbus that a most outrageous murder was perpetrated in that town, on Saturday night last, by JOSEPH NASH, on the person of a son of Judge WHITFIELD. It appears that young WHITFIELD was talking to a lady in the room, which roused JOSEPH NASH's anger, when he caught him by the hair and cut his throat, killing him almost immediately.

HOOSAC TUNNEL.—We have heard nothing of this enterprise since the Legislature was in session last Winter. We wish somebody would report progress. We want to let the world know when they get "clean through," and if there should be a "free ride" out there to see the great "bore," we speak for a seat.—Bunker Hill Aurora.

HEALTH OF BOSTON.—The health of the city continues to be remarkably good. By the Registrar's report, it appears that the number of deaths for the week is only 51, of whom 9 died of consumption, 6 of small pox, 5 of croup, and 4 of scarlet fever. Almost one-half of the deaths were children under 10 years of age.

THE WAY THEY DO OUT WEST.—Wood wanted at this office, in payment of subscriptions for the Repositor. We hope that those of our friends who wish to pay in this way will do so immediately.—Springfield (Ohio) Democratic Repositor.

QUAILS.—The game laws of Wisconsin prohibit the taking of quail after the 30th of January. The Sentinel says that there have been shipped from Milwaukee, during the game season, above eight hundred and sixty dozen quails.

FREED SLAVES.—Fifty-three slaves, freed by the will of the late Dr. CHARLES EVERETT, of Virginia, have just left Petersburg, Va., for Pennsylvania, where they are to be located with an outfit valued at $1,500 for each.—Phil. N. American.

☞ Mr. H. SMITH has recovered $2,200 of the city of Lowell, for injuries sustained by reason of a defect in the street. Exceptions taken.

MARRIED.

In this City, on Thursday evening, Nov. 16, by Rev. Z. Scarles, THEODORE P. ABERNETHY to HELEN A., daughter of A. A. Vestell, Esq., of South Brooklyn.

MONDAY, Dec. 9—P. M.

The Weekly Bank Averages, which we advertise on another page, to Saturday last, Dec. 9, show, in the aggregate, a very slight difference in the Specie reserve, while the decrease in the movement of Loans, Deposits and Circulation is unexpectedly large. The table of returns is not made to include the Empire City and Knickerbocker Banks, which accounts in part for the decreased movement. The general result is:

A decrease in Loans and Discounts of	$1,084,785
Loss in Specie of	4,889
Decrease in Deposits	2,693,702
Decrease in Circulation	268,456

Including the Sub-Treasury Statement of Saturday afternoon, the following is the general

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Specie.	Circulation.	Deposits.	Sub-Tres'ry.

There was a favorable market for Stocks through the day, and a liberal amount of business done, generally at improved prices, until the close of the Second Board of Brokers, when from the announcement that the City Banks had made no increase of Specie up to the receipts from California, which go into the present week's averages, there was more disposition shown to realize, and Erie shares yielded ¼@1 ⅌ cent. from the top rate. The buying through the day extended chiefly to the Bonds and Shares of the Erie, New-York Central, and Illinois Central. Erie opened at 36—sold up to 37, and closed at 36@36¼. The Income Bonds, which sold on Saturday at 92, seller 60 days, brought 95 cash, and 96¼ buyer 60 days. The shares of the New-York Central, which reopen for transfers on Thursday, advanced 2 ⅌ cent., selling at 82½. The understanding appears to be that the annual election on Wednesday will pass off with harmony so far as the present administration and the wishes of the City and Foreign Stockholders are concerned. The operations in Bonds of various kinds, including Virginia State Sixes, which advanced to 93½, amount to $140,000. Panama Bonds advanced 2½ ⅌ cent., selling at 72½. The shares of the Delaware and Hudson Canal are now selling, ex-dividend, 105¼ cash; 106¼ buyer 60 days. Of the Erie Convertibles of 1862, $8,000 were taken at 71 ⅌ cent. Reading shares sold at 67@67½. The Coal tonnage of the Road for its business year, which closed on 30th ult., was 1,928,478 tons, against 1,562,248 the previous year, and the business generally at higher freights on Coal. The Philadelphia Ledger of this morning says there is much interest felt in regard to the course of the Board of Managers on the question of dividend. The cash receipts of the Company through the year, and particularly for the last five months, were large beyond precedent, but the impression here is that they were wholly applied to paying off the recently created and temporary obligations of the Company for wharf property and other improvements; so as to keep the capital cost in shares and funded debt within the figures of last year. We have reason to believe that at least one, if not both of the great Michigan Roads, will declare and pay a Cash dividend in January, out of the largely increased earnings of the present year.

The non-arrival of the Pacific this forenoon, and the large amount of transient bills on the market, caused Foreign Exchange to open dull for Wednesday's steamer. There are telegraphic advices of lower rates at New-Orleans, which also had their influence on buyers. The range is 108½ down to 108¼, and Bank names could be had at 108. On Paris the rates are also unsettled and the demand moderate. On the North of Europe, the terms, relatively, are not so cheap. Money continues to find good employment on first class paper at 12 ⅌ cent., three to six months, and 10 ⅌ cent. for short prime acceptances, of which there is not a large offering. The stock houses of established punctuality get money at 7 ⅌ cent., returnable on demand. It is more freely offered.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $76,220, disbursed $120,622, and held at the close of business $6,778,234.

The official returns to the Secretary of the Treasury of the export value of Cotton, the past Treasury year, show as follows compared with the previous year:

	Pounds weight.	Export value.	Rate per lb.
1853-4	997,822,106	$93,096,930	9.47
1853-5	1,111,370,270	106,456,604	9.58

These figures are almost identical with the semi-official statement which our attentive Washington Correspondent was enabled to send us for publication some weeks ago. The export value of Breadstuffs and Provisions, the past year, compares most favorably with the previous year, owing to the enhanced demand and high prices from abroad, of Flour and Grain. The figures are:

For Treasury Year 1853-4, value	$65,661,949
For Treasury Year 1853-5, value	30,095,322
Difference	$35,515,616

As nearly double in value as it would be possible to count the round per centage. The highest export ever attained by Breadstuffs and Provisions was for the Treasury Year 1846-7, under famine prices, $68,701,921 by Custom-House declaration. The export value of Rice and Tobacco the past Treasury Year compares as follows:

	Tobacco.	Rice.
1853-4	$16,616,048	$2,634,157
1853-5	11,819,319	1,857,056

The average of Tobacco ⅌ hhd. was $79 42 against $70 81 the previous year. The highest export value of Tobacco was in 1841, $12,576,763. The highest average ⅌ hhd. was in 1839, $124 47. The highest export of Rice was in 1847, $3,606,693. The average ⅌ tierce was then $24 97; last year it was $23 05.

Of the Domestic Produce of the country exported the last Treasury year, amounting to $215,157,504, the produce of Domestic Manufactures composed $56,179,503, or about one-eighth, say 12.40 ⅌ cent.; and of this last sum, the produce of the Cotton manufacture of the United States made $5,525,516, or a little over one-fifth, against $6,766,604 Cotton manufactures exported the previous year. The falling off is principally in uncolored Cotton Piece Goods, which yielded to the export table in 1853 $6,226,485, and this year only $3,927,142.

Mr. S. DRAPER's semi-weekly Auction Sale of Stocks and Bonds will take place at the Merchants' Exchange, at half-past 12 o'clock.

The adjourned meeting of the General Railroad Convention will be held at the Astor House, to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, at 7 P. M.
